Washington, D. C., Nov. 23—The late President Roosevelt and former Prime Minister Churchill in August, 1941, while aboard a battleship in the north Atlantic, agreed to address parallel notes to Japan containing a threat of war, the Pearl Harbor investigating committee learned today.

The communications were never sent altho the evidence indicated that Roosevelt did not change his mind until after a conference with former State Secretary Hull upon his return to Washington. Instead, a watered-down version was given orally by Mr. Roosevelt on Aug. 17 to Japanese Ambassador Nomura.

Official Seal on Document

The secret document, containing a draft of the parallel communications to Japan in which the Dutch government also was to join, was obtained from British government files. It bore the prime minister's seal and was dated Aug. 10, 1941, 10 Downing st., Whitehall.

This hitherto unknown development at the famed conference which produced the Atlantic charter and the "four freedoms" was made known with Sumner Welles, former undersecretary of state, in the witness chair. He followed former State Secretary Hull who was cross-examined for an hour after a 22,000 word statement had been read for him at the morning session.

"Might Lead to War"

The draft, put into the record by Assistant Counsel Gerhard Gesell, read as follows:

"Declaration by the United States government that:

"1. Any further encroachment by Japan in the southwest Pacific would produce a situation in which the United States government would be compelled to take counter-measures even tho these might lead to war between the United States and Japan.

"2. If any third power becomes the subject of aggression by Japan in consequence of such counter-measures or of their support of them, the President would have the intention to seek authority from congress to give aid to such power."

"Keep Soviet Informed"

An identical declaration was to be sent by Great Britain and the Dutch with a substitution for the last phrase reading: ". . . or their support of them, his majesty's government would give all possible aid to such power."

A notation at the bottom of the document was as follows: "Keep the soviet government informed. It will be for consideration whether they should be pressed to make a parallel declaration."

The tall and impeccably clad Welles testified that he attended the Atlantic conference. He did not participate in the Roosevelt-Churchill conversations regarding relations with Japan, he said, but Roosevelt summoned him after several days and gave him the gist of them.

"Mr. Roosevelt told me that Churchill, after several conversa-

Allied Court Told of Plans for Conquest

Must Pay Fees

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, Nov. 23—The four nation coördinating committee today decided that German war criminals on trial at Nuernberg must pay their own counsel fees from blocked bank accounts, and the United States was authorized to advance reichsbank funds to pay the lawyers and to obtain repayment from the accused men's resources eventually. Attorney fees are fixed at the discretion of the international tribunal but they are not expected to amount to more than $2,000 per case.

NUERNBERG, Germany, Nov. 23—The full measure of Adolf Hitler's infamy in diplomatic relations and bestiality in warfare is documented in heretofore secret nazi papers presented to the international military tribunal today. The American prosecutor, Sidney S. Alderman, described them as astounding chapters in the history of the greatest tragedy that ever befell mankind.

The documents include memoranda of an April 4, 1941, conference between the fuehrer and the Japanese foreign minister, Yosuke Matsuoka, at which war against the United States in the Pacific was planned. Other papers, originals from the German files, recorded plots and decisions to violate new and old treaties. Most blood curdling was a heretofore unpublished Hitler speech to the supreme commander and commanding generals on Aug. 8, 1939, ordering the attack on Poland with the slaughter of its women and children.

Presentation of the evidence caused a flurry of excitement among Hermann Goering, Joachim von Ribbentrop, and the 18 other high Germans on trial for their lives as war criminals.

"Kill Without Pity"

"I have sent to the east only my Death Head [hussar] units," Hitler said, "with orders to kill without pity or mercy all men, women, and children of the Polish race or language."

Hitler spoke with contempt of world leaders except Stalin, and promised, later, treatment of Russia similar to that of Poland, after the death of Generalissimo Stalin who then, according to Hitler, was seriously ill.

"I have found out," he said, "that Japan does not go with us without conditions and that Mussolini is menaced by a weak headed king and the treacherous scoundrel of a crown prince. We have decided to go with Stalin.

"I shall shake hands with Stalin within a few weeks on a common German-Russian border and undertake with him new distributions of the world.

Bishop Orders Elliott Barred as Vestryman

New York, Nov. 23 (AP)—Bishop William T. Manning said tonight Elliott Roosevelt was not in good standing in the Episcopal church and was ineligible to serve as a vestryman in the family church at Hyde Park, N. Y.

Roosevelt was named Nov. 13 to the board of St. James church of which his father, the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, was senior warden.

Statement Is Issued

The Episcopal bishop of New York issued a statement saying:

"I have officially notified the vestry of St. James church, Hyde Park, that Gen. Elliott Roosevelt is not in good standing in the church and therefore is not eligible for the office of vestryman and cannot serve in that office."

The bishop declined to say why Roosevelt was not in good standing and refused to elaborate on his statement.

[In New York circles familiar with the canon law of the Episcopal church said the reason Elliott is ineligible to be a vestryman is that he has broken the canon law which forbids remarrying following divorce unless such remarriage was approved by the bishop or by an ecclesiastical court set up by him. Elliott has had three wives, the latest being Faye Emerson, film actress. They were married a year ago. Roosevelt's first wife was Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, who divorced him in 1933. Five days later he married Ruth Googins, who divorced him on April 18, 1944, charging him with "unkind, harsh, and tyrannical conduct."]

"The Foggiest Notion"

Edmund P. Rogers, named senior warden to succeed the late President, said he had received no official notice of Bishop Manning's decision, but added that he knew about it.

Asked what the vestry would do as a result of the bishop's ruling, Rogers said:

"I haven't the foggiest notion, but I certainly think the vestry wouldn't go against Bishop Manning."

In Hyde Park, the Rev. W. George W. Anthony, temporary rector of the church, said the bishop had telephoned him, expressing displeasure at the election of Roosevelt.

Allied Ships Take 60,000 Japs Home in 2 Weeks

TOKYO, Japan, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Tokyo news agency said today that 213,446 demobilized Japanese service men and civilians had been repatriated between Nov. 1 and Nov. 15. They included about 60,000 aboard allied ships. This brought the total since the surrender to 509,463 from China, Korea, the Philippines and central Pacific islands.

202 GREAT PAINTINGS SHIPPED TO U. S. AS GI'S WAIT FOR SPACE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, Nov. 23—The preservation of German art treasures is considered more important than the fate of German women and children and the repatriation of GI's, the American military government learned today.

Two hundred two priceless paintings from German museums, valued at more than 100 million dollars, are being shipped to Le Havre, France, aboard a special train tonight for shipment to America and storage in the National Gallery of Art at Washington, D. C., "as they might suffer irreparable damage if left in Germany thruout the winter."

The pictures include masterpieces by Botticelli, Raphael, Duerer, Rembrandt, Titian, Rubens, Goya, Watteau, Fragonard, and Gainsborough and will travel under an armed guard with Lt. Lamont Moore, director of education at the National Gallery of Art, in charge. The selection of the paintings was made by Col. Harry McBride, administrator of the National Gallery of Art. Twenty-six Flemish and Dutch paintings found in the Ehrenbreitstein fortress at Cologne have been returned to Holland.

CITY IS HUNTING 4 BOYS PLAYING WITH DYNAMITE

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 23 (AP)—Four young boys with what Detective William Stone said was enough dynamite to level a substantial section of Philadelphia were the object of a city-wide search by police tonight.

The boys, ranging from 12 to 14, are apparently unaware of the danger of 40 sticks of dynamite which Detective Stone said they stole from a boat in the Delaware river.

RESERVE ROOMS IN PHILADELPHIA FOR M'ARTHUR

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 23 [Special]—Reserving of a suite of rooms for Gen. MacArthur at a midtown hotel today raised the possibility that the Pacific commander might return to the United States in time to attend the Army-Navy football classic here Dec. 1.

Gerald O'Neill, manager of the hotel, would not disclose who made the reservation. There have been many reports recently that MacArthur was returning to this country soon.

Plan Second Chicago Plane Line to London

New York, Nov. 23 [Special]—Pan American World Airways announced today it will begin Chicago-to-London passenger flights soon after Jan. 1.

The announcement came less than a week after American Airlines inaugurated travel service between Chicago and London with a round trip flight of the line's Flagship Chicago which returned to that city Wednesday.

Round trip fare between Chicago and London on American Airlines' craft has been set at $1,089. One way passage to London costs $605; to Shannon airport, Rineanna, Eire, $558, and to Gander, Newfoundland, $143.

Fare $275 from N. Y.

Pan American has reduced its fare between New York and London. With the departure of a London bound Douglas transport tomorrow, the company's passenger fare from New York will be $275. This is a reduction from $572 previously charged by Pan American and two competitors, American Airlines and British Overseas Airways corporation.

The competitors did not immediately follow the rate cut and Pan American did not immediately announce its rate from Chicago to London. An American Airlines official said the company was studying the rate structure and another spokesman said there would be no comment from the company until after Dec. 1. Officials of the British competitor said they were awaiting a decision from London.

Fare Once Was $775

Pan American officials said their New York to London charge was cut because of economies in the use of equipment and flying personnel learned thru war time operations. At one time during the war one way air passage was $775, considerably above the $495 the line now will charge for a round trip.

The present one way fare of $275 was termed somewhat lower than the first class fare charged on the most luxurious liners and a little higher than rates on the best American ships.

MANY PHONE WORKERS BACK ON THEIR JOBS

Nation-Wide Strike Is Threatened

While the Illinois Bell Telephone company last night reported a noticeable back to work movement among its striking long distance operators, officials of the National Federation of Telephone Workers threatened to alert its 250,000 members thruout the country to stand by for a nation-wide strike.

Joseph A. Beirne

On strike are 8,900 toll operator members of the Illinois Telephone Traffic union in Chicago, downstate Illinois, and part of Indiana. They are demanding a $6 weekly wage boost. The company is offering $4, as recommended by the telephone panel of the war labor board.

Strike Delays Fire Calls

While fire raged in the radar stock room of the two million dollar Bell & Howell Co., plant at 7000 McCormick rd., in suburban Lincolnwood, employes reported it required between 20 to 25 minutes about 7 p. m. to telephone an alarm thru to the Chicago fire department. Chief Edward J. O'Donnell of the 27th battalion said that telephone calls for additional equipment were delayed at least several minutes.

After an alarm finally reached Lincolnwood police, it was also relayed by radio to the county highway police, and thence to the fire department.

C. F. Phillimore, night superintendent, estimated the damage at more than $10,000.

Joseph A. Beirne of New York, president of the national federation, said that the union has offered to accept the $4 a week boost retroactive to May 1, 1945, and the extra $2 now, without any retroactive clause. Company spokesmen said they were not aware of any such offer, but would continue negotiations at any time.

Workers Returning to Jobs

The telephone company in its latest survey of workers on the jobs said that there has been a general daily increase since the strike began last Monday. Including nonstriking personnel, only 25.8 per cent of toll operators were working Tuesday, the company reported. The figure rose to 28 per cent Wednesday, to 31.4 per cent Thursday, and to 35.3 per cent yesterday.

The trend was shown further in decreased pay losses. The pay lost by strikers on Wednesday, for example, totaled $95,000. Yesterday's loss amounted to $57,000, showing more workers on the job. Total loss for the five days of the strike thus far stands at $420,000, counting $138,000 for Thanksgiving on the basis of double time.

Suburbar Tie-Up Eased

Many suburban calls which could not be made Monday or Tuesday went thru yesterday, altho suburbs were still hard hit.

Sympathy support by other telephone unions also fell off. The Chicago Telephone Traffic union's 7,200 local operators continued to cross picket lines as from the outset. In addition, members of the Illinois Union of Telephone Workers, also instructed not to cross picket lines, were 100 per cent back on the job yesterday as against 60 per cent of absences Tuesday. Also, only two local exchanges were picketed yesterday, and then only briefly.

HARVESTER PAYS 13.7 MILLION FOR U. S. BUICK PLANT

The International Harvester company yesterday acquired the vast Buick aviation engine plant in Melrose Park from the government for $13,750,000, the Reconstruction Finance corporation—disposal agency for the surplus property administration—announced last night in Washington, D. C. The Harvester company will use the plant to build diesel engines and heavy crawler tractors, and expects to employ 5,500 persons.

One of the nation's largest war plants, the Buick plant is the largest in the Chicago area to be sold to private interests. At the war peak, it employed about 16,000 persons.

Total War Cost 84 Millions

Government investment in land and building at the plant was announced by the RFC as being about $17,286,000. Cost of the machinery, equipment, and other items was about $84,350,000 additional. The company did not buy the equipment, which will be removed at government expense, nor is it buying aviation engine test cells that cost around $4,000,000.

Approximately 121 acres of land at the northeast corner of La Grange rd. and North av. are involved in the transaction. Buildings occupy about 2,029,997 square feet. The main building measures 1,305 by 752 feet.

Made Aviation Engines

During the war, the property was leased to the Buick motor division of the General Motors corporation. Buick produced Pratt and Whitney type engines used to power the Liberator bomber.

Other bids for the plant ranged from $7,250,000. Westinghouse Electric corporation was reported to have made the second highest bid.

Harvester will take possession after details of the sale have been completed. It will have to undertake alterations to fit the plant for peace time use.

Diesel Engines to Be Built

Diesel engines to be built in the plant will range from 35 to 200 horse power. The new crawler type tractor will be the largest built by the company. It will weigh about 18 tons.

Other big war plants to be sold in the Chicago area include the Dodge Chicago plant, said to be the world's largest factory; the Revere Copper and Brass company plant; Aluminum Company of America plant, as well as American Steel Foundries, Bendix Aviation, Republic Steel, and Inland Steel plants. The Western Electric company has leased the Studebaker corporation aviation engine plant.

JOE GETS STUCK ON A PICKET JOB TILL COPS COME

Joseph Bartell, who resides and operates a butcher shop at 3903 S. Oak Park av., Stickney, yesterday telephoned the county highway police at Willow Springs that he was troubled with a prowler who wouldn't leave.

"He just stands there by the picket fence and hollers," Bartell announced. "Every time I yell at him to go away he dances up and down and hollers back that he's cold. If he's cold, why doesn't he go somewhere and get warm?"

Deputies Michael Cone and Jerry Lupinski investigated. In intimate proximity to Bartell's picket fence they came upon Joseph Kveton, 48, of 3030 52d av., Cicero. The deputies investigated further and found the proximity was occasioned by a picket thru Kveton's belt.

"I don't know how I managed to get hung up on that picket," Kveton chattered, "but I couldn't get loose. I thought that guy [Bartell] was going to watch me freeze." The deputies took Kveton to County hospital, thawed him out, and sent him home.

JAPS TOLD U. S. RULE MAY COST $667,000,000 YEAR

TOKYO, Nov. 24 [Saturday]—(AP)—The Japanese people were told today that the American occupation might cost Nippon 10,000,000,000 yen annually, or about $667,000,000. Kyodo news agency gave that figure.

The Bank of Japan has announced it has set aside 3,000,000,000 yen to pay the cost of occupational troops for the first three months.

The office of lord keeper of the privy seal, an advisory institution which has been close to the emperor since 1885, was abolished formally today with imperial sanction. The post was held by Marquis Koichi Kido.

CALLS OFFER TO ARBITRATE UNREASONABLE

Proposal to Boost Pay Withdrawn

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 23 (AP)—General Motors corporation tonight rejected a union request for arbitration of wage issues that led to a strike of 200,000 G. M. employes Wednesday.

Terming the offer of the CIO United Auto Workers a "demand for abdication, not an offer of arbitration," the nation's largest automobile manufacturing concern bitterly assailed the union's stand.

"Stripped of its deception, the union proposal is that G. M. should relinquish its right to manage its business," the company statement said.

Union Expected It

The company's declaration came as a temporary damper to hopes for speedy settlement of the strike which has closed more than 70 G. M. plants in 20 states. Earlier, a G. M. spokesman had admitted the strike was "100 per cent effective."

The statement brought a quick reply from R. J. Thomas, UAW president, who said: "This is what we expected."

G. M. not only rejected the 30 per cent wage demands but also withdrew its counter offer of 10 per cent increases.

A company spokesman said the 10 per cent offer had been made without regard as to whether or not the government would approve an increase in prices of new cars.

"Acknowledge Ultimatum"

Following is a partial text of the company's statement:

"At the conclusion of the meeting on Nov. 15 between your negotiating committee and General Motors you stated that you would advise us of a time convenient to you for the next meeting. Without asking for a further meeting, you addressed a letter to us on Nov. 19 in which you proposed that your wage dispute with General Motors be submitted to arbitration on your specific terms. You demanded a reply before 4 p. m. on Tuesday, Nov. 20.

"Your 24 hour ultimatum was promptly acknowledged. You were advised that we would reply on or before Friday, Nov. 23. Without waiting for this reply, on Tuesday, Nov. 20, you ordered an immediate strike in all General Motors plants represented by your union, thus assuming full responsibility for breaking off negotiations.

"Not in Good Faith"

"This arbitrary action on your part clearly demonstrates that your proposal was not made in good faith.

"It is clearly apparent that the union was fully aware that the conditions imposed in its arbitration proposal were so unsound, unfair, and unreasonable as to insure its rejection. It was merely advanced so that when the expected rejection occurred General Motors could be blamed for a strike which the union had been planning for many months.

"Stripped of its deception, the union proposed that General Motors relinquish its rights to manage its business. This was not an offer of arbitration but a demand for abdication.

"General Motors, of course, rejects such a demand.

"Actually your proposal means that an arbitration board would assume the responsibilities of management . . . that General Motors management transfer to outsiders unlimited direction over all the essential affairs of General Motors.

Won't Surrender Functions

"Such functions of management cannot be delegated to any one not responsible for the continuing success of the business. They will not be surrendered to the union."

The union proposal for arbitration included these points: Appointment of a three man arbitration board; that the company and union books be opened to the board, that the decision of the board be final and that any wage increase ordered would not be used as a basis for a price increase for any General Motors' product.

The company action came soon after Labor Secretary Schwellenbach, who conferred with the President at the White House, disclosed that Mr. Truman had approved a proposal to summon both parties in the dispute to Washington for conferences.

The secretary said he had gone "over the whole General Motors situation" with Mr. Truman.

Union Accepts

Schwellenbach said General Motors officials and representatives of the union would be invited to Washington to talk with Edgar L. Warren, chief of the federal conciliation service.

He indicated the meeting could not be held before Wednesday because the union is planning an executive committee meeting in Detroit Monday and Tuesday.

Walter P. Reuther, UAW vice president in charge of General Motors negotiations, commented, "We will be most happy to confer at Washington and to help in any way we can to effect an early settlement of this strike."

Company officials withheld comment pending official notification from Washington on the Schwellenbach report.

Asked if he was optimistic about the situation, the secretary said: "It is too early to know."

"Unable to Collect Wages"

Meanwhile on the actual strike front the corporation charged that pickets at the Buick division plant in Flint, Mich., were refusing to allow nonunion employes or employes delinquent in their UAW-CIO dues to collect last week's wages.

The company said the pickets were demanding that employes show a paid-up union dues slip before admitting them to the plant where the company had set up a pay roll window.

Ford Asks for "Security"

Those unable to show the slips were advised to go to the union hall and either join or pay up back dues. The alternative was to go home without their wages, the firm reported.

In another major development in the automotive labor picture, the Ford Motor company, pressing its demands for what it terms "company security," today called upon the UAW-CIO to assume financial responsibility for unauthorized work stoppages in a proposed new contract. The company said the union could make "labor history" by agreeing to such a proposal.

CANADA KEEPS MEAT RATIONING TO FEED BRITISH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OTAWA, Ont., Nov. 23—Canada will continue meat rationing, in spite of its abolition in the United States, Prime Minister McKensie King informed commons this afternoon. It will do so in an effort to "avert or moderate one of the greatest human tragedies of all time."

When announcement was made last July that Canada was to resume meat rationing, the purpose was that Canada "might make the fullest posible contribution to the needs of Britain and continent of Europe. The world situation today, and as it will be during the coming months, is even more urgent and more desperate than appeared at that time," Mr. King said.

"Our rationing program in Canada has made it possible to ship overseas more meat and dairy products than we ever before supplied in a similar period of time, and this without imposing any undue or unreasonable curtailment of domestic consumption."

ASSERTS ACTION OF CIO PERILS BIG G. M. PLANT

C. R. Osborn, general manager of the General Motors corporation's Electro-Motive plant at McCook, charged yesterday that local No. 719 of the United Automotive Workers [CIO] refuses to permit its pickets to admit a force adequate to protect the plant. The plant, which manufactures diesel locomotives, was closed Wednesday by the nation-wide G. M. strike.

When the strike was started, the management proposed that 70 workers, divided into three shifts, be admitted to protect the plant, Osborn said, but the union insisted that 50 workers were sufficient for the purpose and has refused to admit more.

CENTRAL CHINA HIGHWAY TOWN REWON BY REDS

CHUNGKING, China, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Chinese Communists have recaptured the highway town of Tsaoyang in central China, 145 miles northwest of Hankow, the Nationalist government acknowledged today.

A usually reliable source here reported that Soviet Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky, commander of the Transbaikal front, had asked Chinese Nationalist officials to return to Changchun, the Manchurian capital, and resume negotiations with him. The Nationalists fled the city one week ago lest the expected Russian withdrawal leave them at the mercy of the Communists.

The Russians have not yet pulled out.

JOBS MEASURE IS REWRITTEN A SECOND TIME

No Mention Remains of 'Full' Employment

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23 (AP)—The so-called "full employment" bill, already revised by the senate, has been rewritten by a house subcommittee to set a goal of "a high level of employment," legislators said today.

A congressman who would not permit use of his name showed a reporter a copy of the substitute for one of the key measures in President Truman's legislative program. It omits all reference to "full employment" and "full production."

"Maximum Opportunities"

Instead, it declares the government's policy shall be to create "the maximum opportunities for employment" and to maintain "a high level of employment [including self-employment], production, and purchasing power."

It states that this shall be done "in a manner consistent with the American system of free enterprise" and calls for encouragement to private investment and individual initiative and the adoption of "sound fiscal policies."

A house expenditures subcommittee drafted the measure after prolonged hearings that prompted President Truman to criticize the committee for "damaging delay."

The full committee is to meet Tuesday to pass on the new draft.

Public Works Program

In the subcommittee's bill, provision is made for a public works program capable of expansion when "widespread unemployment" exists or threatens and of contraction in case of inflation.

The measure says the public works feature and "programs for loans" in times of unemployment shall be "consistent with a financially sound fiscal policy." It calls for encouraging state and local governments to adopt similar public works programs.

The annual "production and employment budget," to be submitted by the President, is eliminated.

In place of that estimate of jobs available and needed [the difference, if any, would be supplied by public works], the President would submit an "economic report" declaring whether the bill's objectives are being achieved and whether government policies are helping or hurting.

Analysis and Suggestion

Whatever the situation, the President would analyze the causes and suggest remedial legislation.

To assist him, the bill would create within his office "a council of economic advisers" composed of five members. They would be appointed by the President, subject to senate confirmation, and would be paid $15,000 each a year.

The total appropriation for the council could not exceed $375,000 annually.

HINT MYSTERY OF COSMIC RAY NEARS SOLUTION

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Nov. 23 (AP)—The newspaper Politiken said today that experiments by Danish, Swedish, and Russian scientists may soon solve the mystery of the source of cosmic rays.

Dr. Niels Arly, Danish collaborator of Prof. Niels Bohr who shared in construction of the atomic bomb, was quoted as saying that latest scientific experiments had shown that cosmic rays derive from a series of explosions in space resembling those of the atomic bomb, and that as in the explosion of the atomic bomb very powerful rays are developed.

Studied from Balloon

MOSCOW, Nov. 23 (AP)—New data on cosmic rays was being sought today by soviet observers in the second balloon ascension this month into high altitudes over central Russia.

Lt. Col. P. P. Polosukhin, the chief observer, who took off last night, radioed that he was 70 miles southwest of Moscow. He planned to remain aloft 24 hours.

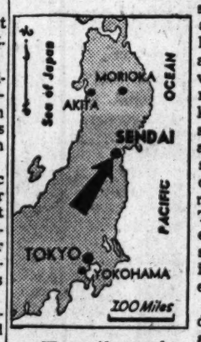
FAMISHED JAPS BREAK INTO U.S. STORAGE HOUSE

TOKYO, Nov. 23 (AP)—More than 200 famished Japanese broke into an American army warehouse today at Sendai, within 200 miles of Tokyo, and seized food and other stores, Sendai police reported. They arrested 180 persons, including 94 women.



Where raid occurred

No other details were available on the outbreak, which was the first to be reported involving American supplies, altho there have been similar raids on Japanese stores in Hokkaido.

While the food riot was in progress Gen. Kuniaki Koiso, one of Japan's war time premiers, surrendered at Sugamo prison to American authorities who had placed him on the "wanted" list of war criminal suspects.

The 65 year old Koiso, leaning on a heavy cane told correspondents, "We believe in our innocence."

U. S. ARMY TEAMS TO SEARCH CHINA FOR LOST FLYERS

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

SHANGHAI, Nov. 23—Ten United States army teams have been newly established in the China theater and a search detachment is scheduled to leave here next week to begin combing a vast area of mountains, valleys, and wastelands for clews that might clear up the fate of, at least, some of the 700 army and about 100 navy personnel still missing in this part of the world.

"It might take as long as two years to investigate all these cases," Maj. Alva R. Smith of Savanna, Ga., head of the group's personnel investigation unit, said today. A detachment command by Col. David D. Barrett, a long time resident of Peiping, has the job of searching thousands of square miles of territory bounded roughly by the Pacific on the east, Kinming and Yenan on the west, as well as the northern half of Indo-China, Formosa, and a number of small coastal islands.

Inevitably members of the group will come in contact with China's undeclared civil war, a prospect that makes the mission even more difficult. Beginning with 37 officers, 36 enlisted men, and a Chinese civilian staff, the detachment will make its headquarters in Nanking.

SELL M'CORMICK RUSH ST. MANSE FOR STORE SITE

BY AL CHASE

The brown stone, mansard roofed mansion at 675 Rush st., built by Cyrus Hall McCormick in the 1870s, was sold yesterday as part of the site for a proposed 3½ million dollar structure to house a big New York merchandise company. It and adjoining property were bought by Arthur Rubloff and Ted Chanock from the Cyrus Hall McCormick estate and others for $450,000.

The mansion property fronts an entire block on Rush between Huron and Erie sts., and the adjacent property at the southwest corner of

The mansion at 675 Rush st. which was built by Cyrus Hall McCormick.

Michigan av. and Huron st., occupied by Zenith Radio corporation, comprises the site for the contemplated new store building. The two properties total 40,000 square feet.

As a period piece the McCormick house has been rated a close second in Chicago tradition to the Palmer "castle" on Lake Shore dr. Altho sometimes labled Victorian, architectural authorities said that its style is French.

Louvre's Influence Noted

"The Louvre is announced by the high mansard roof with its elaborate cresting, its mansard cupola, its bull's-eye windows, and its rusticated stone work," said the late Thomas E. Tallmadge in his "Architecture in Old Chicago."

"The banded columns, the garlands, the richness of ornament certainly stem from Charles Garnier's Nouvelle Opera, the architectural wonder of the world in the reign of Napoleon III."

Cyrus Hall McCormick spent five years building this 45 room mansion. Started in 1874 after the Chicago fire, it was completed in 1879. He is said to have invested several millions in the property. He moved in when he was 70 years old and lived there for five years until his death in 1884. His widow continued to reside there until her death in 1923.

Son Later Lived in House

Their son, Harold, head of International Harvester company, lived in the house for a few years after his divorce from Edith Rockefeller McCormick. For several years the art treasures and luxurious fittings have been watched over by a caretaker while Harold McCormick was in California, where he died in 1941.

Tentative sketches for a four story building to cover most of the site, with a large parking space for store patrons, have been made by Holabird & Root. Construction will be started when tenant negotiations are completed, it was said.

Arthur Rubloff, one of the buyers, was said to control more Michigan av. frontage than any other individual. His firm, Arthur Rubloff & Co., was broker in the purchase. Judson F. Stone, agent for the McCormick estate, represented the seller. McInerney, Arvey & Epstein, and Brown, Fox & Blumberg were attorneys for the buyers. Philo Gilbert, of Wilson & McIlvaine, represented the sellers.

Sees First Snow

Mrs. Odette Bobbitt in the North Western station yesterday.

Chicago's snow was a new sight to the eyes of Mrs. Odette Bobbitt, 19, of Oran, Algiers, who stopped in Chicago yesterday en route to join her GI husband, former Pvt. Ellis Bobbitt, at Richmond, Cal. The two met in Oran two years ago and have not seen each other since Bobbitt was transferred to Italy 14 months ago.

The pretty, dark haired French woman, who measured 4 feet 10 inches, also had her first taste of American Thanksgiving turkey when she landed Thanksgiving day at Philadelphia. Travelers' Aid workers took over her transportation difficulties from there to the west coast and she spent yesterday afternoon with the Chicago Travelers' Aid bureau in the North Western station.

Her first ambitions in the United States, she said, will be to meet her husband and then investigate American foods and clothes. She shyly refuses to go into the diner on her coast to coast trip and eats only at station stops.

JAPAN'S 5 ATOM SMASHERS TO BE DUMPED IN SEA

TOKYO, Nov. 24 [Saturday]—(AP)—American troops wielding sledges, crowbars, and torches began today the destruction of five cyclotrons thru which Japan worked on the secrets of atomic power. After wrecking the machines will be dumped in the sea.

By order of Gen. MacArthur, occupation forces started to wreck a 200 ton American made cyclotron and a smaller model in the Mishina laboratory in Tokyo; two smaller machines at Osaka Imperial university, and a fifth at Kyoto Imperial university.

American scientists after studying Japanese records asserted that the Nipponese had made no important progress toward working out the principles involved in the atomic bomb.

Prof. Seishi Kikuchi, head of the physics department at Osaka Imperial university, said intensive work on atom smashing was considered by the Japanese in 1941, but that they concluded it would be useless—other nations were too far ahead of them, and Japan had no substantial deposits of uranium.

Jap Army Uninterested

He said the Japanese army was consulted on the project but had not understood the significance of the development and declined to aid.

Destruction of the costly cyclotrons was another step in the allied policy of eliminating Japan's war-making potential. The destruction was directed by Maj. Joseph A. O'Hearn of Cambridge, Mass., who said that by nightfall, "Japan's potential for atomic research will have been substantially reduced."

Neither Japan's government nor her scientists knew until today that the equipment was marked for destruction. The small machines from Osaka and Kyoto were being dismantled for removal to a clearing where they will be wrecked by explosives and the remnants dumped into the sea. The huge machine at the Nishina laboratory here, too heavy for demolition by explosives, was being cut into sections which will be loaded on barges and dumped in the Pacific.

Bought in America

Allied headquarters said Japan's leading nuclear physicist, Dr. Yoshio Nishina, bought the 210 ton magnet of his larger cyclotron in America with a financial grant from the Japan Society for the Production of Scientific Research and thru the assistance of Prof. Ernest O. Lawrence of the University of California.

Equipment found in Tokyo consisted of one small cyclotron which Prof. Bansaku Arakatsu had started to build in 1934 but had never finished.

G. B. Zimmerman, physicist of the research division, Universal Oil Products company, Chicago, investigating for the allied command, reported the Osaka laboratory had discontinued atomic research in 1943.

30 U. S. TROOPS HURT AS INDIAN RIOTS SPREAD

Britain's Military Police Patrol Calcutta

CALCUTTA, India, Nov. 23 (AP)—One American soldier was listed as missing tonight and more than 30 other United States troops were injured as rioters stormed thru Calcutta for the third day and disturbances spread to Bombay.

The riots, stemming from demonstrations against the trial of Indian officers who fought with the Japanese in the war, threw Calcutta into civil turmoil. At least 31 persons have been killed and more than 257 injured. More than 20,000 municipal workers went on strike.

British Patrol Streets

British military police began patroling Calcutta streets tonight.

The missing American soldier, whose name was not disclosed, left Camp Howrah, across the Hooghly river from Calcutta, last night in an ambulance. This morning the vehicle was found overturned and burned.

In three days, at least 15 American trucks and ambulances have been attacked and burned by mobs.

Get Helmets and Guns

Steel helmets and submachine guns were distributed today to United States military police in Calcutta after some of them suffered severe head and face injuries when attacked by rioters while on duty at base headquarters.

In Bombay, 500 university and school students left their classes when a strike was called by the Bombay students' congress in protest against police firing on demonstrators in Calcutta.

Crying "Down with British imperialism," the students clashed repeatedly with police. Twenty-six students were arrested.

BRITISH TANKS BLAST INDONESE IN SOERABAJA

Javanese Resistance Melts in Port

BATAVIA, Java, Nov. 23 (AP)—British Sherman tanks wheeling into action for the first time blasted out 2,000 yard gains in Soerabaja today, while a British relief force fought bloody engagements en route to Ambarawa where 16 civilians were reported killed by Indonesian attacks. [The Sherman is an American designed tank.]

Indonesian resistance melted before the fire power of the tanks, and by nightfall Indian troops held two-thirds of Soerabaja in the swiftest advance yet scored in the drive to occupy the port city entirely.

General Visits Areas

The British made the gains without a single reported casualty, while at least 40 Indonesians were killed or wounded. The British captured the Hotel Oranje on the city's northern limits and the wealthy Simpang residential area, and were battling tonight for additional hostelries.

Lt. Gen. Miles C. Dempsey, commander of allied land forces in the Southeast Asia command, and M. E. Denning, political advisor, visited the Soerabaja battle area for the first time and commented favorably on the military progress.

Fighting raged elsewhere, particularly along the 25 mile road from Semarang to Ambarawa. One company of Mahrattas [Indian troops] which set out yesterday from Semarang had failed to reach Ambarawa, and in battles en route lost nine wounded and one killed. At least 150 Indonesians were believed killed.

Situation "Much Quieter"

A company of Gurkhas which had started from Magelang reached Ambarawa last night, and the British said the situation there today was "much quieter."

In Batavia, acting Gov. Gen. Hubertus van Mook expressed disappointment over the refusal by Indonesian leaders to participate in further negotiations with the Dutch, but added that "As far as I am concerned I shall always keep the door for discussion wide open."

ORDER M'ARTHUR TO DELAY TRIAL OF JAP LEADERS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23 (AP)—The war department said tonight that because of the international aspects of the case against former Premier Tojo and other Japanese officials, Gen. MacArthur had been instructed to delay their trials as war criminals.

Cases involving violation of the laws of war or of inhuman acts against civilian populations will be pushed at once, however. The war department said:

"Because of the international aspects of the case against Tojo and other former Japanese high officials, who might be charged with planning and initiating a war of aggression or in violation of treaties or of conspiring for those purposes, Gen. MacArthur has been instructed not to proceed immediately with the prosecution of persons involved in those cases since it was necessary to consult with other governments concerned. These consultations are being carried on at present by the state department and prosecution will begin at the earliest practicable date."

Japan's Premier Confers 3d Time with MacArthur

TOKYO, Nov. 24 [Saturday]—(AP)—Premier Kijuro Shidehara conferred for half an hour today with Gen. MacArthur, presumably concerning the diet session which will open Monday to consider far-reaching reforms. It was their third such meeting.

JAP ARMY IN MANILA WAS HUNGRY, COURT TOLD BY GENERAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 24 [Saturday]—Maj. Gen. Goichi Kira, quartermaster for the 14th area army under Gen. Yamashita, took the stand this morning in the Yamashita war guilt trial to testify to the grave food shortage during the latter part of last year and the first part of this.

Kira, wearing a faded uniform and a ragged shirt, but displaying three rows of ribbons, said that from August last year on, due to the activity of American planes and submarines, the food situation became progressively worse. He said the Japanese army was cut from 600 grams [about 23 ounces] daily to 400, then to 300 and finally to 100.

The importance of his testimony in Yamashita's defense is that part of the charge against Yamashita is that after his arrival in the Philippines last October both prisoners of war and civilian internees had their food rations cut to the starvation point.

6 Yanks and 52 Others Killed by India Explosion

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 24 [Saturday] (AP)—Fifty-eight persons, including six American soldiers, were killed in an explosion of smokeless powder at an army hospital plant 30 miles outside Calcutta, United States army headquarters announced here today. Forty-five others are in the hospital, including five Americans. The other casualties were Indian workmen.

AIMS TO RAISE AGE LIMITS FOR GIs AT SCHOOLS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23—(AP)—Age limits for entrance to West Point and Annapolis would be raised for World war veterans under legislation approved today by the senate and sent back to the house for action on a minor amendment.

Persons entering West Point, now must be between 17 and 22. This would be raised to 24 for war veterans. The present navy limits of 17 and 21 for midshipmen would be extended to 23 years for veterans.

Other legislation approved without opposition by the senate today included:

BARE F.D.R. NOTE TO HULL ON EVE OF JAP ATTACK

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23 [Special] — President Roosevelt's message appealing to Emperor Hirohito for peace on Dec. 6, 1941, the eve of Pearl Harbor, was urged on its way to Joseph C. Grew, our ambassador in Tokyo, by a personally written note to State Secretary Hull from Roosevelt, it was disclosed today thru state department records given to the Pearl Harbor investigators.

The President attached to the message the following note:

"Dear Cordell:

"Shoot this to Grew—I think can go in Gray code—saves time—I don't mind if gets picked up. F. D. R."

FEARS MAN MAY BREED HIS WAY TO EXTINCTION

Given freedom from war and freedom from epidemic disease, the human race will multiply so rapidly that it will eat its way to the bottom of the world's food larder, Anton J. Carlson, University of Chicago physiology professor, said yesterday.

Speaking before a meeting of the Central Association of Science and Mathematics Teachers in the Edgewater Beach hotel, Dr. Carlson asserted that in every species of animal life, including man, history and science prove that in the absence of war, disease, or a controled birth rate the strain will reproduce beyond the capacity of its environment to support it.

The only means of averting this fate, Dr. Carlson said, is by a controled birth rate or by scientific investigation directed toward enriching the staple food supply to its highest possible food value.

F. D. R.-CHURCHILL THREAT OF WAR ON JAPS BARED

Agreed to in August, '41, Later 'Watered Down'

tions regarding increasing dangers in the far east, had suggested that the two governments take parallel action as a warning to Japan," he testified.

The President stated that Churchill wanted the United States to state that if Japan insisted upon its policy of conquest and aggression, the United States, in the protection of its interests, would have to take such steps as were necessary, even including war.

"He ordered me to inform Secretary Hull that he wanted to see the Japanese ambasador immediately upon his return."

"Concensus of Thought"

Shown the secret document, Welles identified it, saying he had helped prepare it after a discussion with Roosevelt on the last day of the conference. It represented correctly the consensus of thought of the participating parties, he said.

Also put into the record at this point was a copy of a "restricted" message from Roosevelt to Hull:

"It seems highly desirable that you and I should see Nomura as soon as I get back. Please ask the ambassador to be ready to come to the White House either Saturday or Sunday. I shall let you know the exact time as soon as possible."

But when the President saw Nomura, Welles said, he gave him an oral message for his government which followed the wording of the declaration of the draft only as far as the beginning of the phrase "compelled to take counter-measures even tho these might lead to war between the United States and Japan."

Instead, Mr. Roosevelt said the United States, if Japan continued to encroach in the southwest Pacific, would be "compelled to take steps to safeguard its legitimate interests."

"Have you any information to account for this watering down of the declaration?" Gesell asked.

"I can't account for it except that the President and Mr. Hull discussed it before Nomura was received," was the answer.

Q. Do you recall anything pertaining to a projected attack on Pearl Harbor in any of the intercepted messages? A. I do not. No one in a high position regarded Pearl Harbor as an object of attack. The only discussion of Pearl Harbor in numerous state department conferences in November, 1941, was of its strategic position in the Pacific.

Holds Same Belief

Welles said he had recalled conversations with Adm. Richardson, removed as Pacific fleet commander in January, 1941, in which Richardson expressed "grave concern" over basing the fleet at Pearl Harbor because the fleet was not secure in that base.

Welles said the state department opposed Richardson's suggestion that the fleet be moved to the Pacific coast because such a step, he said, would have given the Chinese the impression we were withdrawing from the Pacific and would be an invitation to the Japanese to "move in." Welles said he holds the same belief today he did five years ago.

Saw No Danger in 1940

Questioned by Rep. Murphy [D., Pa.], Welles said that in 1940, when he had talked with Richardson, he did not believe that Pearl Harbor was in danger of attack. That, he said, was a question for the President and the navy department to decide.

"So the President," said Murphy, "had the navy department and the state department views before him and it was up to him to make the decision about moving the fleet, basing it on the information before him?"

"That is correct," Welles said.

Hull Appears Ill

Hull appeared to be feeble and ill when he appeared before the committee. An overcoat was flung over his shoulders. The face of the recent Nobel peace prize winner was pale, his eyes tired, and he spoke in a low voice. Gesell, who questioned him, found difficulty in pinning the witness down to definite answers. Hull himself appeared conscious of this and apologized several times for rambling answers.

Hull's appearance attracted the largest crowd which has yet tried to jam itself into the hearing room. During the reading of his lengthy prepared statement at the morning session, he retired but he was back at 2 p. m. blinking his eyes in the glare of the lights set up for the movie cameras.

His statement was a lengthy defense of his actions in the months prior to Dec. 7, 1941, when Jap bombs wrecked the fleet in Pearl Harbor. He vigorously denied that his proposal of Nov. 26, 1941, was an "ultimatum" and decried the phrase as "Japanese propaganda."

The real ultimatum, he said, was served by the Japs themselves on Nov. 20.

The chances of a peaceful settlement between Japan and the United States were never better than "one in a hundred," he asserted, but he kept on negotiating to gain time. The proposed meeting between Prince Konoe, prime minister of Japan, and Roosevelt could only have resulted "in another Munich or nothing at all," he stated.

Under committee agreement with Hull's physician, cross-examination was to be confined to 45 minutes. His questioning by Gesell lasted a few minutes over one hour after Hull had suggested an extension. He will return for further questioning at times to be selected by committee counsel.

Gives Wandering Reply

"At approximately what time did you conclude that solution of the Jap problem was improbable and a Japanese strike likely?" asked Gesell.

The reply was long and wandering and the witness never fixed a date in answer to the question.

"I may say in preface," he told the committee, "that we had been conducting conversations thruout the spring, summer, and fall with the Japanese, both for maintaining our basic principles and to gain time for the military to prepare.

"It was manifest for months that the Japanese had no intention of yielding. We knew this both from diplomatic sources and from the intercepted code messages which we were receiving. It was reasonably clear to me that they had no idea of yielding in their policies of conquest, aggression by force, and the enslavement of conquered peoples.

"We knew we were not going to depart from our policies which were prevalent among peaceful, civilized nations.

Duplicity Expected

"During the early days of October it looked more and more like they intended to adhere to their policies. The situation floated along until the Konoe government fell and the Tojo government came into power. We could detect circumstances and facts indicative of duplicity and double-dealing."

"By Nov. 20, had it become apparent to you that the Japs had really no bona fide intention of settling the problem in a peaceful, diplomatic manner?" Hull was asked.

"The impression we received was that that possibility had been over for months. They were trying to persuade this government by threats to yield its basic principles so Japan could continue its aggression and conquest."

Told of 'Something Awful'

Q. Did you tell the President, secretaries of war and navy of your conclusions? A. We were seeing and talking to them most of the time. We made it a point to exchange our views. Kurusu was pleading that something awful would happen. He came to my apartment one morning and asked: 'Has your government anything more to offer?' The answer was no, the Japanese attitude was absolutely incompatible with ours.

Q. Your most reliable source of information was the intercepted messages? [Japanes code messages deciphered by American intelligence.] A. Yes, I looked on them as I would testimony of a witness giving evidence against himself. We knew what they were saying among themselves and it confirmed our course and our ideas.

Unknown to Japs

Q. Was there any evidence the Japs knew these messages were being decoded? A. None whatever.

Q.—Did you have any information or reports or rumors that the Japs contemplated a sneak attack on Pearl Harbor? A.—I never heard it mentioned.

Q.—Do you remember the dispatch from Ambassador Grew in January, 1941, warning of such an attack? A.—O, yes. I promptly passed it over to the war and navy departments.

Saw No Warning

Q.—Was there any other information, oral or written, by which the President or any one in the government knew the Japanese were planning an attack on Pearl Harbor? A.—I saw nothing that came in during that period of that nature.

Q.—You yourself in your statement this morning told of predicting that the Japs might strike any time, anywhere. Did you consider the possibility of a surprise attack on Pearl Harbor? A.—Not definitely Pearl Harbor. We were receiving messages constantly about Jap movements to the south into Indo-China, which was the jumping off place for an attack on Singapore, the Philippines, or Burma. We were watching that pretty closely. I, myself, didn't think about Pearl Harbor. Of course, I was in the diplomatic service.

Warning Recalled

Q.—On Nov. 27, Gen. Marshall sent out a message to Pearl Harbor and the Philippines putting the armed forces on notice of certain possibilities and stating "hostile action was possible at any moment." Secretary Stimson testified before the army board that he conversed with you before that message was sent. A.—I helped phrase the start of the message which stated that negotiations with Japan were practically at end.

Q.—Do you recall a meeting at the White House Nov. 25 with Knox, Stimson, Marshall, and Stark at which the President said the attack by the Japanese might come as "soon as next Monday?"

Hoped to Win Delay

Hull at this point launched a long rambling reply in which he repeated his theme that he wanted to keep the conversations with the Japanese envoys going "to the last split second."

Brought back to the question by Gesell, he said he could not recall the remark attributed to the President by Stimson.

Q.—Do you recall lunching with the President before a cabinet meeting on Dec. 5? A.—I don't remember it at the moment. I had informed the army and navy the safety of the country was in their hands. We were driving along, hit or miss, even then, in the hope that something might develop.

Q.—About the Dec. 5 meeting with the President? A.—I was talking constantly with him on this highly acute situation. I don't recall any specific conversation that date.

Q.—Had you any time limit in mind on the conversations? A.—We were just doing the best we could.

'Six Months' Sought

Gesell at this point noted that Mr. Roosevelt apparently had wanted six months' delay for the purpose of giving the army and navy time to prepare. The phrase "six months" had been penciled in by the President in connection with a memo bearing on that point.

"Oh, yes," said Hull. "We felt that if by hook or crook the Japs should decide to ease this matter along for weeks, it was felt that in another six months we might be ready."

Hull was asked if there had ever been any agreement between the "ABCD" powers — United States, Britain, China, and the Netherlands, to war against the Japs if the latter attacked any one of the four nations.

Japs 'Poised for Attack'

"I never heard of anything like that," replied Hull, "except that as the danger became more imminent, there were numerous conferences among the staffs representing the governments at which discussions were held.

"Japan was poised for the attack like a diver on the end of a plank for the plunge."

"Did you have any intimation from anyone, Undersecretary Welles, or any one else, that the President had made a commitment with Great Britain?"

"I did not."

The witness again launched a lengthy reply when asked about the testimony of Adm. J. O. Richardson, former chief of the United States fleet, that the state department exercised an influence on the disposition of the fleet in the Pacific.

Jap Caution Is Told

"In negotiations with the Japs, I found them not looking in my face but over my shoulder at the army and navy," he said. "They were like a desperado who gets around into a suspicious place and sees some one armed. He is a little more cautious about blowing a safe than if there was no remote possibility of danger.

"Some one said something about trying to bluff the Japs [Richardson testified that high Washington authorities thought they could bluff the Japs]. Why not say we were trying to bluff Hitler and Tojo? I have always said from my experience with them that a bandit government headed by such unmentionables as Hitler and Tojo would recognize no method except that of force.

"The world was in a state of anarchy with two great nations, east and west, like a wild beast, prowling like savages. Any country which showed too much weakness to the desperadoes would be much more likely to get in trouble than if it followed a reasonably firm policy."

Welles at Hearing

[Acme Telephoto]

Sumner Welles, former undersecretary of state, listens to reading of Cordell Hull's statement before Pearl Harbor investigating committee.

"Hmmm—it just matches."

JAP STAND STRESSED

Hull's statement repeatedly stressed that Japan by the beginning of 1941 felt she had reached the stage where she could demand a showdown with the United States. He noted that the United States had taken in its stride such incidents as the bombing by Jap aircraft of the Panay in the Yangtse river on Dec. 12, 1937.

"During the winter of 1940 and the spring of 1941, I had clearly in mind that the Japanese were out with force in collaboration with Hitler to establish a new world order," he said.

The United States, he insisted, had been "most tactful" and "careful not to make threats" during these years, on the theory that a government making threats ought to be ready to back them up.

"No Chip on Shoulder"

"We were prepared to be patient with Japan," he declared. "We carried no chip on our shoulder."

On Aug. 28 the Japanese prime minister, Prince Konoe, urged a meeting with the President to discuss all problems covering the Pacific area.

Hull offered a lengthy explanation of why this suggestion eventually was rejected. Reasons given included the fact that "Japanese leaders were unreliable and treacherous" and the meeting would have had "a critically discouraging effect upon the Chinese."

F. D. R. "Happy to Travel"

"Altho the President would, as he said 'Have been happy to travel thousands of miles to meet the premier of Japan,' it was felt that in view of the factors mentioned the President could go to such a meeting only if there were first obtained tentative commitments offering some assurance that the meeting could accomplish good. Neither Prince Konoe nor any of Japan's spokesmen provided anything tangible.

"On Oct. 2 I gave the Japanese ambassador a memorandum of an 'oral statement' reviewing significant developments . . . and explaining our government's attitude toward various points in the Japanese proposals which our government did not consider consistent with the principles to which this country was committed. Disappointment was expressed over the narrow character of the outstanding Japanese proposals and questions were raised in regard to Japan's intentions regarding the indefinite stationing of Japanese troops in wide areas of China. . . ."

On Oct. 16 the Konoe cabinet fell and was replaced by a new cabinet, headed by Gen. Tojo. Clearly, said Hull, "The Japanese war lords expected to clinch their policy of aggrandizement and have the United States make all the concessions.

Hull said he told the President at a cabinet meeting Nov. 7 "that relations were extremely critical and that we should be on the lookout for a military attack anywhere by Japan at any time. All concurred in my estimate of the dangers."

On Nov. 20 the Jap envoys presented "an extreme" proposal. Hull knew, he said, "that this was the final Japanese proposition, an ultimatum.

Situation "Virtually Hopeless"

"The situation was critical and virtually hopeless. . . . The chances of meeting the crisis by diplomacy had practically vanished. We had reached the point of clutching at straws."

To gain time, he said, a counter-proposal was drafted. In drafting it, the British, Australian, Dutch, and Chinese governments were consulted.

This proposal, widely known as the Hull ultimatum, a characterization disputed by the secretary, was presented Nov. 26. At a cabinet meeting the day before, Hull said: "The Japanese military were already poised for attack."

Hull revealed that Mr. Roosevelt, in a message Nov. 24 to Churchill discussing the proposal, had declared: "I am not very hopeful and we must all be prepared for real trouble, possibly soon."

F. D. R. Warned Repeatedly

Hull said that in the 11 days which remained before Pearl Harbor, he repeatedly advised the President and members of the war council [Roosevelt, Gen. Marshall, Adm. Stark, Stimson, and Knox] that "there was practically no possibility of an agreement being achieved with Japan."

"With due deference," he said, "I expressed my judgment that any plans for our military defense should include an assumption that the Japanese might make the element of surprise a central point in their strategy.

Mr. Roosevelt meanwhile had gone to Warm Springs, Ga., on a vacation and on Nov. 30, Hull said, he advised the President by telephone to advance the date of his return to Washington. The President came back Dec. 1.

On Dec. 6, Hull concluded, reports were received from a number of sources that a Japanese fleet of 35 transports, 8 cruisers, and 20 destroyers was moving from Indo-China toward the Kra peninsula. On the same day, the President telegraphed a personal appeal to the emperor of Japan.

WAR MEMOS SKIP HAWAII

BY PHIL DODD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23—A stack of 40 confidential White House, state department, army, and navy memorandums and telegrams written in the few months preceding the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, were given the Pearl Harbor investigating committee today, but none indicated any fear in high government quarters that Pearl Harbor would be attacked.

The papers were introduced as evidence in conjunction with former State Secretary Hull's appearance before the committee. They included various proposals suggested for settling American differences with Japan, estimates of the military situation, and communications between Washington and American Ambassador Grew in Tokyo.

Former Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, who last year proposed "scorched earth" peace terms for Germany, was revealed as author of a plan for settlement of the Pacific differences. His scheme included reduction of the size of the American fleet in the Pacific.

Grew Sends Attack Tip

Only one document introduced today had any mention of Japanese intentions against Pearl Harbor. It was a report from Grew in January, 1941, that the Peruvian minister in Tokyo had heard the Japanese intended to strike Pearl Harbor first in the event of war with the United States.

This warning, mentioned in the navy court of inquiry report on the Pearl Harbor disaster, was received from Grew on Jan. 27, 1941. A report of it was made by the navy department to Pacific fleet headquarters Feb. 1, but with the notation that naval intelligence placed no credence on the rumor. Grew's telegram read:

"My Peruvian colleague told a member of my staff that he had heard from many sources, including a Japanese source, that the Japanese military forces planned, in the event of trouble with the United States, to attempt a surprise mass attack on Pearl Harbor, using all of their military facilities. He added that, altho the project seemed fantastic, the fact that he had heard it from many sources prompted him to pass on the information."

Scoff at Report

The navy department's comment on the report was:

"The division of naval intelligence places no credence on these rumors. Furthermore, based on known data regarding the present disposition and employment of Japanese naval and army forces, no move against Pearl Harbor appears imminent or planned for in the foreseeable future."

Morgenthau got in his licks as a diplomat on Nov. 19 with a proposed American-Japanese agreement which was termed by Maxwell Hamilton, chief of the Far Eastern division, in a memorandum to Hull, as "the most constructive" he had seen.

Morgenthau proposed reduction of American naval forces to a "normal footing," an American nonaggression pact with Japan, China, the British empire, the Netherlands, Thailand, and Russia, and negotiations between Japan and China on the future status of Manchuria.

Wanted Restrictions Lifted

Morgenthau also would have had this country give up its extraterritorial rights in China and to influence the British to give up Hong Kong. He also would have the United States lift immigration restrictions on "all races" and remove its freeze on Japanese funds.

Japan's concessions in the Morgenthau plan would have included removal of Japanese forces from China and Indo-China and withdrawal of all troops except a police force from Manchuria.

RECORDS SHOW F. D. R. SLASHED DEFENSE FUNDS

Reveal He Cut Budget of Army and Navy

BY WALTER TROHAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23—Evidence that President Roosevelt had consistently hampered the national preparedness program, as introduced into the Pearl Harbor investigation by Rep. Keefe [R., Wis.], today was expected to explode the myth that the late commander in chief was balked in his defense program by pinch penny policies of congress.

For the first time Keefe made public records locked in files as secret. The records for 12 years from 1932 to 1941, inclusive, show that Mr. Roosevelt consistently slashed the army and navy requests for annual appropriations by millions of dollars thru the budget bureau.

The records also showed that while congress had made some cuts beyond those of the chief executive it had authorized a number of budget increases.

Cut Requests 2 Billions

Keefe introduced the figures after Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.] and Rep. Murphy [D., Pa.], committee members, had intimated that congress was responsible for the lack of preparedness in the Pacific, recounted by Adm. J. O. Richardson, former Pacific fleet commander.

Keefe introduced figures on army and navy budgets for the 10 fiscal years before Pearl Harbor. His figures include 1932, which was entirely in the Hoover administration, and 1933, partly in the Roosevelt administration, so as to thwart Democratic attack on the grounds of partisanship.

The tables showed that for the 10 year period the President had cut army and navy budget requests by $2,801,846,013. Less than $100,000,000 of these cuts were made by Hoover.

The tables also showed that congress had exceeded the President's budget by $1,296,409,328. Almost all of the increases were made in the Roosevelt administration.

Try to Blame Congress

Democrats have sought to blame congress for failure to arm the army and navy and for failure to fortify Guam. The record shows President Roosevelt never had called for fortification of Guam but had merely asked to have the harbor dredged.

Unofficial but thoroly reliable White House press conference transcripts reveal that the question of fortification of Guam was first put to the President Jan. 17, 1939. He denied this country had plans to fortify the islands when asked to comment on a Tokyo report warning Japan would smash the American fleet if such fortification was attempted.

The question of fortification was raised at the next White House conference three days later when Roosevelt was asked about a naval appropriation bill.

Told the bill contained a provision for 5 million dollars to dredge Guam's harbor, Roosevelt was asked if he favored fortification of the island. He turned back the question to inquire whether it had been proposed to "fortify" the island, explaining that the money was largely going for dredging the harbor.

Bill Finally Passed

The proposal to dredge the harbor was defeated in the house in 1939. Early in 1941 it was revived and passed. Work was underway when the Japs attacked and captured the island.

Rep. Keefe's figures, in millions, follow:

Appropriations, navy, fiscal years 1932 to 1941, inclusive:

	Requested by navy dept.	Budget est.	Approps. by cong.
1932	354	347	365
1933	409	351	333
1934	353	308	316
1935	335	303	304
1936	526	509	489
1937	586	551	541
1938	559	567	534
1939	719	650	538
1940	1,077	976	943
1941	5,236	3,561	4,346
Totals	9,434	7,428	8,285

Budget cut requests $2,006,031,343; congress exceeded the budget figures by $857,694,198.

War department, fiscal years 1932 thru 1941:

	Req. by war dept.	Rec. by budget	Approps. by cong.
1932	351	343	339
1933	331	316	304
1934	320	277	277
1935	308	285	280
1936	361	331	355
1937	467	383	388
1938	468	426	417
1939	584	532	531
1940	922	895	851
1941	8,695	8,038	8,480

In addition, the army during the above years requested a total of $5,060,633,252 in "contract authorizations." The budget recommended $5,218,090,488. Congress authorized $5,255,883,466.

Summing up, Keefe noted that a total of $17,185,894,377 was asked by the army. The budget cut this to $16,390,079,707, or a cut of $795,814,670. The congress appropriated or authorized a total of $16,828,795,047, or $438,715,340 above the budget.

On totals for army and navy, Keefe said congress exceeded the President's budget by $1,296,409,538 after the budget had cut the army and navy by $2,801,846,013.

Breaks Ground for New Building

[TRIBUNE Photo]

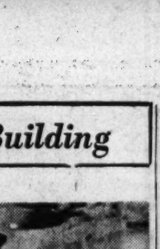
Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Chicago Tribune, speaking yesterday at ceremonies attending the start of work on the new eight story addition to Tribune Square.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Lawrence Clark, 3224 Union av., said yesterday he had not driven a funeral car thru the picket lines at St. Casimir's Lithuanian Roman Catholic cemetery, as stated in THE TRIBUNE last Sunday. John Urbas, 25, of 4046 Montgomery av., admitted that he drove the car and that he reported Clark as the driver.

REPORTS SON AND $20,000 ARE MISSING

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 23 (AP)—Police received a report today from Clarence J. McLeod, former Republican congressman, that between $20,000 and $30,000 was missing from his home here and that a second floor closet door apparently had been forced open.



Malcolm J. McLeod

Informed that McLeod's son, Malcolm J., 18, had been missing since 1 a. m., Inspector of Detectives John O. Whitman expressed belief the youth may have been forced to accompany the theif or thieves. Whitman noted a number of house robberies recently have been reported in the neighborhood.

Detectives said McLeod told them Malcolm telephoned him shortly before 1 a. m. and quoted the youth as saying he was leaving for Philadelphia to be gone for several days and "would explain everything" on his return.

COL. M'CORMICK STARTS WORK ON TOWER ADDITION

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, dug the first shovel as excavation began yesterday for the first caisson of the 6 million dollar addition to Tribune Tower and the W-G-N building. The ceremony, which was broadcast by W-G-N, was held in the huge cavity which has been scooped out of the ground at Illinois and St. Clair sts., where the new building will rise.

The new structure, which will complete THE TRIBUNE'S group of buildings in the block bounded by Michigan av., Illinois, St. Clair, and Hubbard sts., will add 2,252,800 cubic feet of space to the great aggregation of buildings, making them one of the largest in the city.

Tower Rises 621 Feet

Tribune tower has 4,770,254 cubic feet, the W-G-N building 1,483,061 cubic feet, and the Tribune plant 1,259,300 cubic feet. With the new building's 2,252,800 cubic feet, the grand total of Tribune properties joined together in the block will be 9,765,415 cubic feet.

Tribune Tower, from the lowest basement to the tip of its flag staff, rises 621 feet.

Col. McCormick traced the history of THE TRIBUNE from its founding on June 10, 1847, when 400 copies of the paper were printed in a small frame building at Lake and La Salle sts. He told how Joseph Medill became editor in 1855, how he brought the paper thru the Civil war years and established it as the voice of the middle west.

Midwest Still Expanding

Col. McCormick recalled the building of Tribune Tower in 1924 and the erection of the W-G-N building in 1935 to provide one of the finest broadcasting plants in America.

"As we are about to begin work on the first caisson which will rest on bedrock," he said, "we are reminded that Chicago and the midwest are still expanding and W-G-N and THE TRIBUNE will always expand, too, with the city and community with which we have grown, by serving, for more than 98 eventful years."

An Eight Story Building

John W. Park, production manager of THE TRIBUNE, who is in charge of the project, explained to the radio audience that the new building will rise eight stories from the Illinois st. level, and seven stories from the Michigan av. level, and will match the architecture of Tribune Tower.

He told how the new structure will provide for the expansion of all TRIBUNE departments and W-G-N facilities. The ground floor will be an extension of the present press room, enabling THE TRIBUNE to have four press lines, each about one block long. Mailing room space also will be increased.

Bigger News Room

The second floor will provide for expansion of the circulation department and on the third floor the composing and stereotype rooms will get 50 per cent more space, Park said. The fourth floor will increase the size of the main news room by one-third and permit enlargement of several divisions of the editorial department.

W-G-N broadcasting activities will take over most of the fifth floor, which will have a three story studio large enough to handle a full symphony orchestra. Other studios will occupy the upper floors.

Steel for the new building—2,500 tons—has been ordered for delivery March 1. There will be no riveting, because all structural iron work will be welded, thus avoiding interference with radio broadcasting and annoyance to Tribune Tower tenants and occupants of neighboring buildings.

PERU GOVERNMENT'S WIDE POWERS OVER NEWSPAPERS ENDED

LIMA, Peru, Nov. 23 (AP)—The chamber of deputies passed new press legislation today, setting aside the present restrictive law and providing that only the Supreme court has power to close a newspaper after cause has been proved. Previously the government had wide power to suspend newspapers.

The new law also requires newspapers to print periodically the names of shareholders and mortgage holders, if any. It provides that a person offended by a news article or editorial may require the newspaper to devote equal space to a reply.

Opponents of the bill termed it a restriction on freedom of the press. An 11 hour debate which lasted until dawn preceded passage of the new law.

25 Korean Terrorists Plead Guilty to Plotting

SEOUL, Korea, Nov. 23 (AP).—Twenty-five of a group of 44 alleged Japanese terrorists pleaded guilty before an American military government court today to charges of plotting espoinage and strife to upset the American occupation of Korea.

AIR BARRICADES PERIL PLANS OF U. S. COMPANIES

Planes Are Blockaded at Coasts of Europe

BY FRANK STURDY
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23—Existing air route barricades must be eliminated by agreements with foreign countries before the three United States air lines preparing to fly the North Atlantic this winter will be able to operate into Europe and to the far east.

At present, the planes of Pan American Airways, American Airlines Overseas, and Trans-World Airways are stopped virtually at the coast of Europe. True commercial freedom of the air is still far from realization.

Nine Nations Agree

Only nine countries have ratified the five freedoms convention evolved at the Chicago air conference, and one of these has nullified the fifth formula which is the goal of American policy, so in effect there are only eight.

The fifth freedom gives the planes of one country the right to land in a second, and there pick up passengers for destinations in a third country.

Representatives of twenty other countries have signed, but these nations are not bound until their governments ratify the agreement.

The countries which have ratified are Afghanistan, China, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Liberia, Netherlands, Paraguay, Turkey, and the United States. Turkey reserved its rights in respect to the fifth freedom.

Bilateral Agreements

These ratifications have been supplemented by bilateral agreements negotiated by the state department with eight other countries. Seven of these—with Spain, Denmark, Sweden, Iceland, Ireland, Switzerland, and Norway—follow a standard form devised at the Chicago conference, and include all five freedoms. The eighth, with Canada, is a special document.

The United States has an agreement with France, signed in July, 1939, allowing an American company to fly into Marseilles, in return for rights accorded the French to fly to this country. The civil aeronautics board at the time designated Pan-American Airways to fly this route, and it remained in Pan-American's share in the recent division of north Atlantic regions. [Pan-American is now petitioning the CAB for an extension from Marseilles to Paris, which is on the route designated for TWA.]

Pact with Britain

The pre-war agreement with Great Britain permits two round trips weekly to each country, and specifically designated Pan-American as the United States operator. It was signed in 1937. During the war, the agreement was amended to add two round trip flights for Pan-American, and authorize three for American Export Airlines [meanwhile purchased by American Airlines and renamed American Overseas Airlines] for a total of seven.

An interim agreement with Italy gives the United States five freedoms privileges, but the eventual form of the agreement hinges on the terms of the final peace treaty.

The extremely important Azores, mid-Atlantic stepping-stone owned by Portugal, and the vital port of Lisbon are available to us only thru a private agreement between Portugal and Pan-American Airways, made before the war.

Contract with Colombia

An almost forgotten bilateral agreement between the United States and Colombia was the only pre-war intergovernmental air contract between this and all the countries of South America. Pan-American built its Latin routes thru private understandings.

Such important countries as Brazil, Chile, and Panama have not yet signed agreements, either bi-lateral or the Chicago formula, aside from the elementary first two freedoms. Argentina was not represented at the meeting.

Bolivia, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Peru, Uruguay, and Venezuela were represented by delegates at the Chicago convention who signed the five freedoms, but their governments have not ratified these actions.

Some Caribbean Countries

In the Caribbean, Cuba, Haiti, and the Dominican republic have signed but not ratified. Mexico, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Guatemala in Central America are in the same status.

Most essential to the operations of United States air lines in the immediate future on Atlantic routes are improved agreements with Great Britain and new ones where they do not exist with countries under British influence, with Russia and her satellites in the Balkans, and Poland, Portugal, France, and Belgium.

There are no negotiations in progress with Russia, which agreed to send delegates to the Chicago air conference but recalled them when the Russian party, flying over the northwest ferry route thru Alaska over which thousands of American combat planes went to the Red air force, had proceeded as far as Winnipeg.

Negotiations are under way with Czechoslovakia, which on Oct. 15 opened Prague to Switzerland's air line, Swissair. The state department is also trying to reach understanding with France, Portugal, and Belgium, to open Paris, Lisbon, and the Azores, and Brussels.

Britain Is Scheming

Great Britain, also seeking billions in loans from the United States to restore her industry and world trade, has shown no inclination to modify her opposition to the fifth freedom principle, and is reported to be pressing such countries as Egypt, Iraq, Iran, Arabia, Turkey, and Greece, long under British influence, to refuse to agree to the United States urgings for five freedoms contracts.

Questions of landing rights in Germany, Austria, and Hungary must be solved by arrangements among the United States, Great Britain, Russia, and France in respect to their separate occupation zones.

CHURCHILL AND BEVIN CLASH ON GREEK POLICIES

LONDON, Nov. 23—(AP)—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin today asked that nations dispel world suspicion by stating their aims openly and frankly, and clashed with Winston Churchill over the Labor government's policy in Greece.

Referring to former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's suggestion in commons yesterday that suspicion of Russia could be allayed if the soviet government would relax censorship thruout her territory, Bevin declared:

"If the great powers which are primarily concerned will say exactly what they want, either in territory or bases or any other form, then it can be examined, and there is no need to take any action of any kind which will cast reflection on the actions of one another.

Invites Discussion

"I really think that if any large or small nations are suspicious of Great Britain I invite—I repeat, I invite—them to tell me frankly what their suspicions are and I will frankly face them. Great Britain will not decline . . . to have anything it does or wants or seeks to promote discussed in open assembly. I do not think I can be franker to remove suspicion than that."

Speaking in commons on the second day of a foreign affairs debate, Bevin tangled with Churchill when he said he had suggested to the Greek government that the plebiscite over the return of King George II. be postponed to March, 1948.

Churchill interrupted, shouting: "A delay of two or three years would be wrong, for it's a burning question in Greece."

Greeks Suggested Delay

Bevin explained that the suggestion for postponement originated with the Greek regent, Archbishop Damaskinos.

The foreign minister told commons that he had first disapproved postponement, but then had put this three point program before the archbishop and admonished him to stick to it, if accepted.

1. Elections to be held at the latest by the end of next March.
2. The plebiscite to be held in March, 1948.
3. Immediate steps to be taken to deal on a sound basis with the economic and financial situation, and to provide for the reconstruction of Greece.

"I offered no bribe or loan condition," said Bevin, "in dealing with the elections or the plebiscite."

During the debate yesterday Eden said he and Churchill had assured King George II. that the plebiscite would be held soon after the war.

Bevin said he had "no objection to monarchy" in Greece, "but let it be constitutional monarchy and not a party monarchy."

KELLY SEES HOW LONDON TACKLES HOUSE PROBLEM

BY WARD WALKER
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Nov. 23—Mayor Kelly, who has slum clearance and low rent housing high on the list for Chicago's future, today toured Hackney, one of London's bombed out boroughs and inspected pre-fabricated housing installations and a municipally owned housing project.

This evening he held a press conference for British and foreign newspaper men and showed a special Chicago movie prepared for the delegation seeking to bring the permanent headquarters of the united nations organization to Chicago.

Correspondents who had never seen Chicago expressed surprise at the sight. Typical comments were: "Not a cowboy town, is it?"

Most Healthful City

"Chicago has thoroly adequate sites where the Century of Progress exhibition was held in 1933-'34 and along the lake front," Kelly said.

"Chicago is bound to be the air center of the world," he said, and added that Chicago is the "most healthful large city in the world, made so by the unlimited supply of fine water from Lake Michigan and rigid sanitation."

Spiritually, he said "Chicago is an ideal city for the world capital, typically America, unhampered by any historic prejudices, but with half of its inhabitants of foreign birth or parentage, with friendly ties of blood and of commerce running to all nations of the world."

Kelly had hoped to present Chicago's invitation to the united nations committee in person along with the five members of the Chicago committee but will not get a chance before leaving for home Tuesday. He abandoned his plan to visit Ireland.

Sees Three Types of Houses

At Hackney, Kelly saw three types of pre-fabricated structures—dwellings to last 10 years, some to last two years, and metal huts containing two rooms.

"These are comfortable, just what we need in Chicago and what we are erecting," the mayor said.

Most of the Hackney buildings are two or three story apartments, including the municipal project. They are owned by the borough council and rented for low rates on a weekly basis—$2 a week for two bedrooms, a combination living-dining room, kitchen, toilet and bath.

PAN-AMERICAN INTERVENTION IN NATIONS URGED

Hint Uruguayan Plan Aims at Argentina

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23 (AP)—Uruguay has suggested that the American nations adopt the principle of collective intervention when one of their number denies its people essential rights or fails to fulfill its international obligations, the state department disclosed tonight.

The proposal was advanced in a 2,500 word note which Dr. Alberto Rodriguez Larreta, Uruguayan foreign minister, handed to Ambassador William Dawson and other American chiefs of mission in Montevideo yesterday.

Its adoption would mark a broad departure from past inter-American policy, which has been strongly against interference in the internal affairs of other countries.

Aimed at Argentina

No mention of Argentina was made in the note but diplomats saw it as applying directly to the military regime there.

The strongest support for nonintervention policy in the past has stemmed from fears of Latin American countries that the United States might interfere in their affairs.

In the note, which the state department said it understood Uruguay was making public today, Dr. Larreta said the nonintervention principle would not shield without limitation "the notorious and repeated violation by any republic of the elementary rights of man and of the citizens."

Benefit of All Asked

Summing up, the note asserted that nonintervention "cannot be converted into a right to invoke one principle in order to be able to violate all other principles with immunity."

Thus, it added, a "multilateral collective action" exercised unselfishly by all other American republics could not be construed as injuring the government against which the action was directed. Rather, it said, such action "must be recognized as being taken for the benefit of all, including the country which has been suffering under such a harsh regime."

At the state department, officials authorized only the following quotation:

"It deals with a subject which we must now face and therefore represents a very important contribution to inter-American relations.

"As sooh as we have an opportunity to analyze the message in detail the department will probably issue a full statement of its comments."

DEER SEASON OPENS TODAY IN 41 COUNTIES OF NORTH WISCONSIN

Madison, Wis., Nov. 23 [Special]—More than 100,000 hunters are slated to take to the woods during Wisconsin's five day deer hunting season, which opens tomorrow, Controler C. A. Bontly of the state conservation department reported today. The open season, Nov. 24 to 28 inclusive, covers 41 counties.

Only major change in the state's deer hunting regulations is a new law, passed by the 1945 legislature, requiring deer hunters to wear red. The purpose of the red clothing is to avoid being mistaken for a deer. The measure provides that "no person shall hunt unless at least 50 per cent of his jacket, excluding the sleeves, shall be red or covered with a handkerchief or cloth of red color."

Deer hunting with rifle or shotgun [loaded with single ball or slug] will be permitted in these counties: Adams, Ashland, Barron, Bayfield, Burnett, Chippewa, Clark, Columbia, Douglas, Eau Claire, Florence, Iron, Jackson, Juneau, Langlade, Lincoln, Marathon, Marinette, Marquette, Monroe, Oconto, Oneida, Polk, Portage, Price, Rusk, Sawyer, Shawano, Taylor, Vilas, Washburn, Waushara, Forest, and Wood.

An open season for deer hunting with shotguns loaded with single slug or ball [buckshot unlawful] will be permitted in the counties of Buffalo, Crawford, Grant [north of highway 18], Iowa [north of highway 18], La Crosse, Richland, and Trempealeau.

LONDON FLIGHT PLANE TO MAKE NEW YORK HOPS

Chicago Will Begin Service Soon

The Flagship Chicago of the American Airlines, which last Monday inaugurated air travel between Chicago and London, will carry passengers between Chicago and New York each week after it has completed the transoceanic flight, it was announced yesterday.

Bonham Fox, district traffic manager of the air lines company, said the plane would carry 38 passengers to New York and a like number back to Chicago each week. Service is expected to begin within the next two weeks.

When the plane returns from London it must be flown from Chicago to New York for an overhauling and maintenance work, Fox explained.

Similar Service to Capital

A similar service will be inaugurated between New York and Washington, D. C., where another American Airlines plane took off yesterday bound for London. The planes will carry more passengers in this country because their fuel load will be lighter.

Altho the company has not yet worked out a schedule for the flights, Fox said the transoceanic liner probably will leave Chicago for New York on Wednesday night and return to Chicago Sunday night.

When American has acquired enough DC-4 planes, which are C-54 transport planes converted for civilian use, it plans to use all such planes on a regularly scheduled domestic service.

Woman Booked for Flight

The only passenger booked by the company so far for the second trans-Atlantic flight next Monday is Mrs. Gladys M. Brady of 5490 South Shore dr. She listed her occupation as a housewife.

Failure of applicants for tickets to present passports and visas is holding up completion of a passenger list, and altho enough applications have been received to fill all planes for several weeks, any one who showed up suddenly with a passport and visa probably could obtain a ticket, Fox said.

The company soon will require applicants for tickets on the Chicago to London flight to present their passports and visas a week in advance. This policy is expected to end confusion and assure a full passenger load on each flight.

EISENHOWER GOES 'ON SICK CALL' AS SENATORS O. K. HIM

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23 (AP)—Gen. Eisenhower, new acting chief of staff, went on sick call today. Suffering from a severe cold, he entered the Ashford General hospital at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., "to prevent any complications developing," the war department announced.

His illness "canceled for the time being Gen. Eisenhower's plans to return to Europe, where he intended to fulfill several important engagements," the announcement added.

With Gen. Marshall, already on terminal leave preparatory to retirement, the duties of the chief of staff are being performed by Gen. Thomas T. Handy, deputy chief. Eisenhower had planned to fly back to Europe today to clean up his affairs there as chief of American occupation forces in Germany. He was nominated for chief of staff last Tuesday. His nomination was approved unanimously today by the senate military affairs committee.

DE GAULLE GIVES PLANS FOR NEW RULE OF FRANCE

PARIS, Nov. 23 (AP)—President de Gaulle called today for nationalization of credit, electricity, and insurance, and for a foreign policy based on international coöperation.

The constituent assembly unanimously voted confidence in De Gaulle's new cabinet, and the Communists pledged loyal but "not blind" support of his interim government. The vote ended a nine day crisis in which De Gaulle once threatened to resign because of communist demands.

De Gaulle called for reform of government administrative machinery, of the civil service and the judiciary system; for a constitutional change in the military structure for national defense; for "modernization" of mining, industry, and agriculture; for an immediate budget, and franc revaluation.

De Gaulle emphasized international coöperation, but said France would refuse to adhere to any international decisions in which she had no voice, "at the same time and level as the other great powers."

HOW POPULATION RISE BEARS ON JEW-ARAB FIGHT

Figures Studied for Clew to Palestine Future

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

JERUSALEM, Nov. 23 — Whether Palestine will become in the future an Arab state with a Jewish minority or a Jewish state with an Arab minority is the fundamental question in Palestine. So every figure relating to census and population is of international importance.

The Palestine government's statistics department, from data compiled by the British Eric Mills, reports there are now a million Moslem Arabs, 100,000 Christian Arabs, and 600,000 Jews in Palestine, a territory the size of Maryland. The census of 1931 showed 750,000 Moslem Arabs, 70,000 Christian Arabs, and 175,000 Jews.

The Jews consider both the census and the present estimate incorrect. They argue that the 1931 census was boycotted by large Jewish groups [revisionists and religious Jews] and, therefore, the number of Jews reported is too low. Furthermore, the Jews say, the number of Arabs in the census is too high because the figures for the Arab villages were supplied exclusively by the mukhtars [Arab village heads]. These officials, the Jews assert, are unreliable and illiterate in many cases and received special government bonuses for reporting the births of Arabs.

Claim Three-City Majority

The present government estimate, based on an incorrect census made 14 years ago, does not give full consideration to the large scale unauthorized Jewish immigration into Palestine. On the other hand, the estimate of the Palestine Arabs shows the increase in population to be the highest in the world, contrary to the situation in all neighboring Arab countries—so say the Jews.

The Jews emphasize the Jewish majority in three of the four biggest towns in Palestine: The government's statistics show Jaffa, with 60,000 Arabs and 25,000 Jews; Haifa, with 55,000 Arabs and 65,000 Jews; Jerusalem, with 55,000 Arabs and 100,000 Jews, and Tel Aviv, 200,000 Jews and no Arabs.

The Jewish rural population, 150,000, is mostly concentrated on the coastal plain and the valley of Jazrael. The rest of the Jews are in small rural towns.

Some Jewish circles go so far as to estimate the present number of Moslem Arabs at 800,000, the Christian Arabs at 150,000, and the Jews at 700,000—from which it would follow that a Moslem majority in Palestine is questionable.

"Arabs Becoming Landless"

The Arabs do not express doubt as to the exactitude of the government statistics.

"The Jews are buying Arab land, and the Arabs are becoming landless," is an Arab accusation. The Jews reply that the government often anounced readiness to resettle dispossessed Palestine Arabs. The few who refused resettlement prefer city life and its higher standard of living—according to government reports.

"The Jews are invading our country," assert the Palestine Arabs. "But we bring prosperity to the Arabs, too," the Jews answer.

The Peel commission's report in 1937 said the Palestine Arabs' wages were two to four times higher than in Syria, and three to 10 times higher than in Iraq.

Jews Give Statistics

Not only did Jewish immigration not push the Arabs out of Palestine, but on the contrary Jewish created prosperity attracted Arabs to settle near Jewish settlements, the Jews claim. They insist this is proved by government statistics:

In the Jaffa-Ramleh district, in 1922, the Arab village population was 42,000. In 1938, after strong Jewish colonization in this area, the Arab village population in the same district was 126,000. In the Haifa district in 1922, the Arab village population was 18,000, while in 1928 it was over 50,000.

The foregoing contentions underly the passionate politics, not only of the Palestine Jews and Arabs, but of the Arab league and world Jewry activities. Their development and solution do not depend on the local populations or local authorities, but on the general climate of international relations.

War Mothers Donate Iron Lungs

Green Thanks Club

Members of the Illinois World War Mothers' club last night were thanked by Gov. Green for their donation to the state of three iron lungs, valued at $3,700.

Gov. Green spoke at a dinner of the club in the Palmer House attended by 500 persons. The lungs, he said, will be given to the unit for female veterans at Kankakee State hospital, to the veterans' unit at Elgin State hospital, and to the veterans' unit at Jacksonville State hospital.

They will be available, the governor said, in emergency to any resident of the state.

HUNGARIANS DOOM IMREDI TO BE HANGED

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Nov. 23 (AP)—Bela Imredi, former Hungarian premier, was sentenced by the people's court today to be hanged. He was convicted of having committed war crimes and anti-Jewish acts. He filed an appeal to the national council of people's courts. Witnesses against Imredi included Gen. Winckelman of the German SS [elite guard] and Eric Veesenmayer, described as Hitler's personal representative in Hungary. The prosecutors accused Imredi of having sacrificed his country to his personal ambition. He was charged with having declared war on the allies without consulting parliament and with having collaborated with the Nazis.

CITY PRESENTS STATION PLAN TO RAILROADS

Improvements of Chicago's railroad passenger terminal facilities, particularly those east of the river, were discussed yesterday by railroad executives representing all stations with Joshua d'Esposito representing Mayor Kelly.

D'Esposito traced on maps prepared under his direction views of the city on suggested improvements. While the executives conceded these maps outlined something tangible, they declined to commit themselves until they have considered the proposals further.

They asserted that any suggestions about improvements must be weighed against requirements based on the expected volume of travel, with due consideration of problems arising from use of streets.

NEWS FREEDOM CLAUSE VOIDED IN UNRRA BILL

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23 (AP)—A senate appropriations subcommittee today struck a "news freedom" clause from a 550 million dollar UNRRA appropriation bill.

Subcommittee members said the clause, inserted by the house, was eliminated by unanimous consent. It would have barred relief work by the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration in countries which denied the American press free access to news of UNRRA activities.

A rider requiring UNRRA to pay at least parity prices for farm products purchased in the United States was inserted into the bill by the subcommittee. This amendment was championed by Chairman Elmer Thomas [D., Okla.] of the agriculture committee. It provides that no part of the 550 million dollar fund can be used to purchase any farm product or commodity processed from a farm product, at a price which does not reflect parity to the producer. Parity is a price level designed to give the farmer a price for the things he sells comparable to the level in a previous favorable period—in most cases, 1909-'14.

U. I. TRUSTEES FAVOR PLAN TO USE PORTABLES

An $800,000 program for moving 400 government owned portable houses to the University of Illinois campus at Urbana-Champaign for the use of married veterans unable to obtain living quarters was approved by the University of Illinois trustees at the University club yesterday. The project amplifies the $500,000 plan previously announced by Gov. Green.

The trustees speeded construction of a $300,000 betatron building by approving award of the general contract on a cost plus fixed fee basis. The betatron, the world's most powerful x-ray, invented by Prof. Donald W. Kerst of the faculty, will be employed in physics research in the realm of radiation and nuclear science. The university has a $1,500,000 appropriation for the project.

Dr. Basil C. MacLean of Rochester, N. Y., was appointed consultant for a 2 billion dollar 250 bed general hospital addition in Chicago. The board authorized the release of $1,520,622 from its appropriation for various building projects.

GUARD IRAN CAPITAL AS REBELS KILL 20 MORE IN PROVINCE

TEHRAN, Iran, Nov. 23 (AP)—Col. Norman Schwarzkopf, chief adviser of the Iranian [Persian] police, moved to safeguard Tehran itself today as an Iranian general reported rebels had killed 20 officials and land owners in continuing fighting at Mianeh, Azerbaijan province.

Schwarzkopf, former head of the New Jersey state police and Lindbergh kidnaping investigator, said:

"I have ordered certain gendarmerie posts from the south provinces to Tehran to reënforce the capital's garrisons and concentrate in vital places in case something happens in Tehran. There is no indication of any disturbance. The Tehran situation is under control."

[An Iranian military spokesman said on Wednesday that about 6,000 Russian troops had been moved toward Karaj, 25 miles northwest of Tehran. Moscow radio said today a "popular assembly" in Tabriz had demanded "genuine self-governmen" for Azerbaijan.]

PACKER KILLED BY AUTO DRIVEN BY YOUTH OF 15

Irving C. Arant, 52, of 4634 Monroe st., a packer, was killed yesterday when he was struck by an automobile in Irving Park rd. at Marshfield av. The driver was Richard Fine, 15, of 3800 Lake Shore dr., son of Michael R. Fine, an electrical contractor. With young Fine was David Reiff, 16, of 520 Stratford pl., whose father, Alexander J. Reiff, a lawyer, owns the car. The youths said the car horn was sounded, but that Arant walked in front of the car. Police released them.

Miss Frances Quarello, 24, of 713 S. Sacramento blvd., a clerk, suffered bruises yesterday when a driverless truck pressed her against a street car which she was boarding in Des Plaines st. at Randolph st. The truck had been parked on a gasoline station lot at the intersection by the driver, Nicholas Bierling, 53, of 1229 W. 73d st. The emergency brakes apparently slipped, and as the vehicle rolled down the lot ramp Bierling shouted a warning to Miss Quarello. The truck came almost to a stop as it reached her.

British Want Tripolitania Under United Nations Rule

LONDON, Nov. 23 [Reuters]—Britain agrees that Tripolitania—former Italian colony in North Africa—should be placed under the jurisdiction of the united nations, Philip Noel Baker, British minister of state, said in the house of commons today. He added the government should use its influence to secure a "reconstructive" policy for Japan. A policy similar to that for Germany, was needed, he said.

Honor Kelvyn Park High on W-G-N Program Today

Kelvyn Park High school will be saluted by the Citizens of Tomorrow program over W-G-N at 9:30 a. m. today. Rose A. Pesta, principal, will welcome the program to the school. Philip Maxwell, master of ceremonies, will name to the roll of honor Audrey Eggers of Kelvyn Park and Peter J. Weiland Jr. of Portage, Wis. Florence T. Love will direct the Girls' Choral club, Harriet Smolinski, student violinist, also will entertain.

REVEAL HITLER ORDERED KILLING OF EVERY POLE

Allied Court Is Told of Plans for Conquest

and our brutality. Genghis Khan had millions of women and children killed by his own will and with a gay heart, history seeing in him only the great state builder. What the weak western European civilization thinks about me does not matter. I have given the order and will have every one shot who utters even one word of criticism. The aim of war is not to attain certain lines but consists in the physical destruction of an opponent.

Short War Promised

"Col. Gen. Von Brauchitsch has promised me to bring the war against Poland to a conclusion within a few weeks. If he had told me that it would take two years, or even one year, I would not have issued the order to march. I would, instead, have entered temporarily into an alliance with England instead of Russia. For we cannot conduct a long war.

"In any case, a new situation has been created. I have witnessed those miserable worms, Daladier [former French premier] and Chamberlain [then British prime minister] in Munich. They will be too cowardly to attack. They will not go any farther than a blockade.

"My pact with Poland was only meant to stall for time. Poland will be depopulated and colonized with Germans. And, besides, gentlemen, in Russia will happen just what I will practice in Poland. After Stalin's death—he is seriously ill—we shall crush the soviet union.

"The small countries do not frighten me. After Kemal's [Premier Kemal Ataturk] death Turkey will be ruled by morons and half idiots. Carol of Romania is a thoroly corrupted slave of his sexual desires. The king of Belgium and the northern kings are weak puppets depending upon the good digestion of their over-fed and tired peoples.

Uncertain About Japan

"We must take into account the defection of Japan. I have left to Japan a whole year's time to decide. The emperor [Hirohito] is the companion piece of the late czars. Weak, cowardly, and irresolute, he may fall before the revolution. My association with Japan was never popular.

"Furthermore, we will cause unrest in the far east and Arabia. Let us think of ourselves as masters and consider these people at best as lacquered half-monkeys who need to feel the knout.

"The occasion is favorable as it never has been before. I have only one fear and that is that Chamberlain or such another dirty swine comes to me with a proposition for a change of mind. He will be thrown downstairs. And even if I must personally kick him in the belly before the eyes of all the photographers."

Goering Dances Savagely

The German report on the meeting said Goering jumped on the table and danced like a savage.

Memoranda of Hitler's April 4, 1941, conversations with Matsuoka imply it was ostensibly a peace meeting. The Japanese foreign minister was seeking to have placed at his country's disposal Germany's naval and military developments and inventions. Other evidence has indicated that he was successful in this plea.

Hitler, replying to a similar statement from Matsuoka, said that Germany, too, considered a conflict with the United States undesirable but that it already had made allowances for such a contingency.

Matsuoka told Hitler the Japanese believed war with the United States was inevitable. "In his opinion," the German report reads, "this conflict would happen, rather sooner than later. His argument was, why should Japan, therefore, not decisively strike at the right moment and take the risk upon itself of the fight against America?"

Hitler promised immediate help should Japan become involved with America. He said the United States would try to destroy Germany and Japan separately and that safety lay in joint action at a favorable opportunity.

Decision to Strike in West

Another of the heretofore secret German documents was Hitler's speech before a conference of his supreme commanders on May 23, 1939, three months before the war began and while he was publicly proclaiming peaceful intentions. The purpose of the meeting was his decision to strike in the west while he believed his eastern frontiers were safe.

"Russia is not at present dangerous," he said. "It is weakened by many incidents. Moreover, we have a pact with Russia. Pacts, however, are only held as long as they serve a purpose. Russia will hold herself to it only as long as Russia considers it to be to her advantage."

"America," he said at another point, "is still not dangerous to us because of its neutrality laws.

"My decision is unchangeable. I will attack France and England at the most favorable and quickest moment. A breach of the neutrality of Belgium and Holland is meaningless. If we do not do it then England and France will. Without attack the war is not to be ended victoriously."

In a speech to his commanders in chief on Aug. 22, 1939, Hitler described Germany's economic situation as desperate, blaming the Versailles treaty restrictions and declaring war was the only recourse for relief.

A memorandum dated Dec. 18, 1940, outlined a plan to attack Russia with the preparations to be completed not later than May 15, 1941.

The strategy called for the mass of the Russian army in western Russia to be destroyed by tank penetrations cutting off a retreat and preventing a soviet escape to the wide spaces of the east.

In the forenoon the four nation tribunal received documentary evidence of the defendants' participation in the six years of preparations for war—nazi domination of Germany from 1933 to 1939, its murders and concentration camps, imprisonment for all dissenters, and its economic and psychological mobilization and its secret rearmament in violation of its treaties.

Industrialists Accused

Industrial leaders, politicians, propagandists, and army and navy leaders were linked with the plot.

Thomas Dodd, assistant United States prosecutor, brought in evidence to show how Goering and Hjalmar Horace Greeley Schacht, Hitler's chief financial adviser, kept German finance and industry in line.

Also named by Dodd as entering into the conspiracy for world aggression were Gustav Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach, German munitions king, and officials of the I. G. Farben chemical trust and other industrial leaders. Krupp has been granted a delay in his trial because he is incurably ill.

Dodd's evidence showed that these leaders agreed to finance the Nazi party as bulwark against communism and then later coöperated in a secret rearmament program.

Firemen Revive 3 Women Overcome by Gas at Work

Firemen worked two hours yesterday to revive three women who were overcome, apparently by gas, while working in the machine shop of the United States Chain company, 2240 Lumber st. The women then were taken to Mercy hospital. They are Maria Juarez, 21, of 221 W. 25th st.; Jeannette Degennaro, 28, of 3330 Roosevelt rd., and Lillian Townsend, 25, Negro, of 4458 South Park way.

ADMITS FAKING HIJACKING, SALE OF LIQUOR CARGO

August DiVittorio, 31, of 2724 Wallace st., a truck driver whose sudden prosperity caused detectives to bring him in for questioning, last night confessed to Sgt. Timothy O'Connell of the police cartage detail that he faked a hijacking on Aug. 30 and sold a $25,000 cargo of whisky for $4,000.

Detectives quickly rounded up nine other men whom Di Vittorio implicated as his accomplices, including John Ferrentino, owner of the Ferrentino Motor service, 3010 Wentworth av. Di Vittorio said four of the men left him bound, gagged, and blindfolded in his truck in an alley near 39th st. and Normal av. Di Vittorio reported that four gunmen had kidnaped him at Dyer, Ind., while he was driving from a distillery at Lawrenceburg, Ind.

O'Connell said Di Vittorio quit his job with the Harris Forwarding company, 2249 Hubbard st., two days later. He paid $2,200 of debts and purchased an $800 car and $700 worth of furniture immediately. In his home detectives said they found $1,800 concealed in an oatmeal box.

THREE SEIZED IN CREMATIONS OF FIVE BABIES

Manchester, Tenn., Nov. 23 [Special]—A woman and two men were held in jail on murder charges tonight after they were accused of cremating newly born babies for fees of $300 to $500 at their "Moonlight" tourist camp near here.

Sheriff Sim Banks said he was informed the three had burned one baby alive and that four other dead babies were cremated in an outside fire at the camp. The five cremations were alleged to have taken place within a period of about the last month.

FBI Making Tests

Federal bureau of investigation authorities were making laboratory tests of several pieces of bone and flesh wrapped in charred paper which Sheriff Banks said officers found on an ash heap at the tourist camp along with four baby dresses.

Those held are H. H. Peters, 65; his wife, and her son by a previous marriage, Harry F. Carraway, 28. Following their arrest the sheriff rushed them to the jail at Fayetteville in adjoining Lincoln county "for their own safety."

Sheriff Banks said he was first informed of activities at the camp last night by a Negro couple, Willie and Mary Ramsey, who had been employed at the camp for a month. The couple claimed they had not been allowed to leave the place, he related, but slipped away last night after Peters refused to pay them their month's wages.

The Accusers' Story

The sheriff said the Ramseys gave the following account of the cremations:

Women came to the camp and gave birth to babies which Peters delivered. Four of the babies died at birth, but one was alive. As soon as they were born, Peters soaked them in oil or gasoline, took them outside, and placed them on a wood fire near the camp office. The cremation took place early in the morning.

Peters got a fee of $300 for burning one baby and $500 in each of the other cases.

Mary Ramsey marked on a calendar the dates of the cremations. They took place

TRUMAN POLICY IS 'A PLAN FOR INFLATION: TAFT

Senator Denounces OPA and the CIO

BY WILLIAM MOORE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23—Warning that good $2 bills cannot be made from $1 ones, Sen. Taft [R., O.] attacked President Truman's wage and price policy today.

Sen. Taft

Taft branded the administration program as "a planned policy of inflation," and "a reckless and irresponsible policy, adopted, apparently because the [CIO] political action committee demands it."

On Free Enterprise

In a fiery speech, Taft told the senate that the CIO plan is to wreck the free enterprise system, and said the general increase of wages and prices means the end of free enterprise in this country.

Taft centered his rebuke on the administration's office of price administration, insisting that the nation would be better off without OPA as now administered, and calling for a reform of the agency. He accused administration propagandists of falsely telling the American people that the need for government control is as necessary now as during the war to prevent inflation, while encouraging inflation by policies of Commerce Secretary Wallace and OPA Chief Bowles.

Wages and Prices

He told the senate that the average wage rates have gone up 12 per cent since the spring of 1943 while prices have been boosted only 3 per cent.

"Now this policy is to be intensified," Taft continued. "While the President avoided any direct statement on the percentages of increase which he favors, it was given out to the press that government economists felt that a 20 per cent or even a 24 per cent general increase in wages could be made without increasing prices."

A 24 per cent increase, he said, would add 34 points to the cost of living index of 142, making it 176, or an increase of 76 per cent since 1941. A corresponding increase in prices would result in at least a 60 per cent rise over the pre-war level, the senator asserted, thus doubling the whole increase in the cost of living which has taken place during the war.

"Policy Means Inflation"

Summarizing Mr. Truman's recommendations for higher wages and price control, which Taft said cannot be maintained, Taft said:

"It should be clear to all that the policy means inflation and ultimately will force an increase in prices of 65 per cent, or certainly 60 per cent, over pre-war prices. We cannot lift ourselves by our bootstraps.

"We do not really increase our national income merely by increasing wages, as the President claims.

"It would be easy to reach Henry Wallace's figure of 200 billion a year by inflating wages and prices. We could do it even better by stamping every bill to make it a $2 bill."

ICE FANS LAUNCH SKATING SEASON IN ROGERS PARK

Ice skating enthusiasts started their outdoor season yesterday at the Rogers Park playground rink, which was opened officially at 11:30 a. m. after city employes and neighborhood boys worked Thanksgiving day to prepare the pond.

Sam Leone, park director, said the rink will be open daily until 9:30 p. m. A shelter adjoining the rink will be available and a hockey rink is being prepared on the 300 by 200 foot area. The ice at the park arena at 7200 Sheridan rd., was prepared by spraying water on the playground Thursday during freezing temperatures. There is no charge for skating.

Hundreds of skaters, young and old, took advantage of the opening yesterday of the Edgewater Beach hotel skating rink, formed by flooding several tennis courts.

FATHER OF GIRL KILLED IN BLAST DIES OF INJURIES

A Thanksgiving day furnace explosion claimed its second victim yesterday when Harry Sento, 42, of 9632 Brandt st., Oak Lawn, a paper cutter for the Daily Drovers Journal, died in Little Company of Mary hospital.

Sento's daughter, Karlene, 6, was killed, and his son, Charles, 6, was among nine injured when the blast partly wrecked the newly acquired home of Orville Rainville, 37, a truck driver for the Drovers Journal, at 9601 S. Merton av. in Columbus Manor, adjoining Oak Lawn.

Santo before he died said he was out motoring with his children to get ice cream for Thanksgiving dinner in his home when he decided on impulse to visit Rainville.

ASSERTS PEOPLE WILL BALK AT BOONDOGGLING

W. H. Woodfield Jr.

Any attempt to solve unemployment problems by returning to the boondoggling of the post-1929 depression will arouse the opposition of the average American, William H. Woodfield Jr., of San Francisco, Cal., imperial potentate of the Shrine of North America, said in an address here last night. Woodfield, who has visited 150 cities in a year's tour of shrine temples and hospitals for crippled children, addressed an audience of 4,500 Shriners at Medinah temple's fall ceremonial after 400 candidates were initiated.

"The majority of people want to work in private industry," he asserted. "They don't want handouts. They don't want to be digging holes only to cover them up again as an excuse to collect a check."

HANGS BY BELT AT 14TH FLOOR, BUT SAVES SELF

A pair of legs dangling outside the windows of the De Muth Steel Products company on the 13th floor at 189 W. Madison st. resulted in an emergency call to police yesterday. When a squad reached the scene, they found Stanley McAuley, 43, of 741 N. Dearborn st., a window washer, working on the 14th floor windows.

McAuley explained that he apparently had fastened one hook of his safety belt insecurely and fell, dangling from the ledge by one strap. He hauled himself back on the ledge, after office workers, seeing the legs outside their windows, had called police.

LETTERLESS GIs IN BERLIN TO GET CHRISTMAS MAIL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, Nov. 23—The 78th division GIs will get Christmas packages and the military government will get holiday mail in Berlin, the postmaster, Capt. Donald Cotter, formerly postmaster in Stockton, Ill., announced today.

Hitherto the army has been relying on airplane delivery of mail to the isolated Berlin garrison, but unfavorable weather coupled with the lack of radio ranges at the German airport and the fact that most of the military planes have been stripped of radar and other navigational instruments have left the capital without deliveries of letters since mid-October.

"I have had no mail from my wife and three kids in Freeport, Ill.," said Cotter. "So we are no longer depending on planes but are using railways and trucks for the postal service. Beginning Monday there will be twice weekly train service from Frankfurt to Berlin with mail cars attached to every train."

FAR EAST ADVISORY BOARD DECIDES ON A JOURNEY TO JAPAN

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23 (AP).—The allied far eastern advisory commission will go to Japan "in the near future," with the approval of Gen. MacArthur, it was announced today.

The commission—made up of representatives of ten allied governments, but not including Russia—has been meeting here since it was established at the end of last month. The decision to go to Tokyo was made at a commission meeting at the state department today.

Announcing the impending trip, the commission said it had decided it would be a mistake to consider "in detail the many complicated problems connected with control of Japan in a purely academic atmosphere."

HITLERISM TRIUMPHANT

The German armies surrendered, the defeated country is occupied and governed by allied troops, and Hitler's principal lieutenants are on trial at Nuernberg. From these surface indications it might be assumed that the Nazis lost the war.

Unquestionably they lost in the military sense, but their ideas and ideals have triumphed. Those who supposed that with the defeat of the Nazis in the field the principles they stood for would be destroyed were grievously mistaken. In truth, the whole apparatus of racism, force, slavery, and indifference to suffering has been taken over by the allies. The factory has changed hands, but there has been no change in its methods or its products under the new management.

The allied control council in Berlin has ordered a forced migration of 12,000,000 German civilians. No charge is made against them as individuals. They are being persecuted on account of their ancestry. The boundaries of Europe have been redrawn and the edict has gone forth from allied headquarters that no German hereafter may live outside Germany. This is, of course, pure Hitlerism.

Just as Hitler once said that Jews, Poles, and others were, by the mere fact of their origin, inferior peoples deserving of no consideration, so the United States government and its allies now say that Germans are similarly tainted.

Hitler's solution of minority problems was forced migration. That is now our solution. The Nazis didn't care how much suffering they caused to those they deemed inferior human beings and now we have adopted the nazi concept. The mass migration is to start in the dead of winter and is to be pursued ruthlessly to its conclusion. The Germans are to be held responsible for the care of the migrants in transit tho the Germans have no government, an insufficiency of food, almost no fuel for the domestic needs of their present population, and no means of livelihood to offer the newcomers.

Those who thought that with the defeat of the Nazis slave labor would disappear from Europe have now to contemplate the continued enslavement of German prisoners by the allies. Americans who may have supposed that our country would never engage in this traffic have read, with shame, that the American government is handing over prisoner-slaves by the hundreds of thousands to the French. These captives have been horribly mistreated by their new masters, as the International Red Cross has attested.

The catalog could be continued for pages. It doesn't suggest, it proves that Hitler's ideas have triumphed. They are now Truman's ideas, and Attlee's, and De Gaulle's. They always were Stalin's.

Perhaps all this is agreeable to the British, the French, and the Russian peoples. It surely offends the American conscience. Already protests are being heard, and not only from this newspaper. The Catholic bishops have warned that the course we are following will produce another war. The Quakers, of course, have been saying much the same thing for many months. Now they have been joined by Lutherans whose opinion finds its voice in the current number of the Lutheran Outlook—the official organ of the American Lutheran conference.

All these spokesmen are expressing the conscience of America. The time cannot come too soon when our government will say to its allies that these brutalities must cease. If the others insist upon following their present course they cannot expect further coöperation or assistance from us. If we cannot make them behave decently, we can, at least, refuse to join them in these senseless barbarities.

PROFESSORS ARE STILL PROFESSORS

The atomic bomb produced, among other things, the novel theory that since science produced the monster, the world's affairs should be taken from the hands of politicians and entrusted to the scientists. It now begins to appear that the scientists who created it are no more capable of handling the terrible force than the man in the street.

The other evening a character named Stotter, who says he is an advertising man, got the use of a hall at the University of Chicago to beat the drum for an organization that calls itself the Independent Citizens' Committee of Arts, Sciences, and Professions. He got Dr. Samuel K. Allison, the director of the university's institute of nuclear study, to preside, and persuaded Dr. Reuben G. Gustavson, vice president of the university; Dr. A. C. Ivy, the distinguished physiologist of Northwestern university, and others to attend.

The name of the committee has a familiar odor, and Stotter let the cat out of the bag when he listed some of its New York members. They include Frank Sinatra, James Cagney, Fredric March, Jo Davidson, Paul Robeson, Norman Corwin, and others. Some of these gentry are confessed Communists and the rest are assiduous followers of the Communist party line. Their names pop up in every front organization that the Communists set up in this country.

The Independent Citizens' Committee of Arts, Sciences, and Professions doesn't give a tinker's dam for control of the atomic bomb or atomic energy in the interests of humanity. Their aim is to get the bomb for Russia. If Joe Stalin woke up tomorrow morning and decided to ask for 60 billion dollars, the Pacific fleet, and air bases in Alaska, Robeson, Davidson, and the rest of this crew would have a new organization started by tomorrow night to convince the public that it was America's duty to humanity to give them to him, and throw in the Washington monument as an added gesture of confidence in Russia's peaceful intentions.

Dr. Allison isn't a Communist. Dr. Gustavson isn't a Communist. Dr. Ivy isn't a Communist. Neither are they fellow travelers. They are just professors, and professors are still professors—kindly, intelligent, immensely learned, and in matters outside their own field as simple and trusting as new born babes.

A NOTE OF HOPE IN A WORLD THAT NEEDS IT

Those who think that everything in the country is getting worse all the time should receive some corrective cheer from the automobile race which Maj. Lenox Lohr of the Museum of Science and Industry staged on Thanksgiving day, a reproduction of a similar event held on Thanksgiving day half a century ago, in which only two of the starters managed to finish the course from Jackson park to Evanston.

It will be conceded, of course, that the automobile has improved somewhat in the last 50 years. Maj. Lohr seems to have demonstrated, however, that the automobiles made 50 years ago have also improved during that period, since the ancient relics which he hauled out of the museum made a far better showing on the run than their duplicates did in the original race. This time four of them managed to reach Evanston.

It is possible, of course, that the canny major slipped some device for injecting atomic energy in the cylinders under the seats of the horseless carriages. Gross materialists also may have something to say about the improvement in paving in the last half century. We sweep these observations aside and prefer to believe that things are not as bad as they might be.

12 HOURS TO NEW YORK

The trip to London by plane takes only a few hours longer than the trip to New York by the fastest train now available. That provides as good an index as any to the problem which faces the railroads in the years immediately ahead. If the railroads are going to keep any of their passenger business, they will have to bestir themselves.

Their hope lies in cutting their running time by about a third. The goal should be Chicago to New York in 12 hours. With that kind of a railroad schedule, the air lines will not have everything their own way. The railroads can offer greater dependability of service because they can operate in all kinds of weather and greater comfort because the passengers will be given more space in which to move about. The airplane will fly to New York in three hours or perhaps less but the the advantage over the 12 hour train will be more apparent than real if the traveler can leave Chicago at the dinner hour and arrive in New York at breakfast time or a little later.

To cover the ground that fast, the railroads will have not only to push up the speed of their trains but also to eliminate the stops which only serve to carry on an obsolete tradition. Nothing less will save the passenger business. The alternative is the loss of all of it to the air lines.

COMMUNISTS IN DETROIT

Detroit has become a national focus of infection among union groups, especially the auto workers, so it is, therefore, enlightening to learn from a Detroit newspaper that there are now more communist organizations in the Detroit area than there are Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions, Exchange, or other service clubs.

On Oct. 26, when the 26th anniversary of the Red revolution in Russia was celebrated at the Book-Cadillac hotel in Detroit, the leader of the Communist party in America, William Z. Foster, put in a personal appearance to express his pleasure at the growth of the movement in one of America's greatest industrial centers.

At the same rally, no less than 32 separate communist organizations paid their dues to Phil Raymond, state treasurer of the Communist party. Not numbered among these were such fellow traveler and social penetration front outfits as the Lawyers' guild, American Polish Democratic committee, the Slav congress, Friends of Soviet Russia, and a dozen similar organizations.

The General Motors strike and the conflict being engendered in Detroit and the rest of the country become more understandable when it is appreciated that the Communist party is no negligible force in the centers of industrial production. The argument used to be made every time that Mr. Roosevelt ran for another term that he "saved the country from revolution and communism" by his enlightened social program. If so, what have the comrades in Detroit got in mind?

IS THE ARMY HOARDING PHYSICIANS?

[New York Sun]

Tho the war department reported in a recent letter to Sen. Reed of Kansas that it plans to release 13,000 physicians, 25,000 nurses, and 3,500 dentists from the army by July 1, 1946, its recent record does not seem to guarantee performance. In the same letter, in answer to a request for information, it was said that on Jan. 1, 1945, there were 45,511 physicians in the army and on Sept. 1 last there were 46,017. The number of dentists declined slightly from 15,103 at the start of the year to 14,583 on Sept. 1. During the period covered by Sen. Reed's inquiry many communities felt the lack of qualified physicians even more severely than earlier, for some of the older physicians who had continued in harness died and others were compelled to quit practicing because of failing health. At the same time many physicians in army uniform have complained of little or no opportunity to use or improve their professional skill.

The figures given to Sen. Reed are already six weeks old and it may be that the war department in the interval has improved on its previous performance. Tho this may be considered only part of the general demobilization problem, the release of skilled physicians not needed by the army has more than individual significance. Hundreds of American cities and towns could testify that this is a community problem.

Test Your Horse Sense

Select the answers which you consider best. The last problem counts five points. Then look for the correct answers below.

1. Which type of gold was most valuable to the allies during the war?
   Green Yellow Black White
2. Corduroy fabric is derived from which substance?
   Cotton Wool Linen Silk
3. Which one of the following substances tastes the sweetest?
   Brown sugar, Corn sirup, Sorghum, Saccharin
4. Which one of these instruments is associated with ravioli?
   Saw Fork Ax Chisel
5. The word "banns" should make one think of which cereal?
   Oats Wheat Rice Barley
6. Now that meat is becoming more plentiful, it may be safe to offer this food problem in which you are to match the creatures listed in the left hand column below, with the names of their meat when it is sold across the butcher's counter. You are entitled to one point for each correct judgment.

[a] Calf	[v] Capon
[b] Cow	[w] Ham
[c] Hog	[x] Mutton
[d] Sheep	[y] Veal
[e] Poultry	[z] Beef

Score yourself as follows: 0-2, poor; 3-6, average; 7-8, superior; 9-10, very superior. [Note—The last question counts five points.]

MR. PEPYS CELEBRATES

24th Nov.—Celebrated my birthday by looking up a few of my classmates, by which I mean fellows born in the same year. Found I have been traveling in goodly company, such as Gen. MacArthur, Mr. Mencken, the Sage of Baltimore, and the Scottish poet, M'Tavish, who writes for my column. These lively lads are running the bases in their respective jobs with unimpaired vigor, so am not worrying about advancing years. In fact, will challenge them to a 100-yard dash.

Had a birthday card from my contributor, Shandy Gaff, drawn and painted by his own hand, good enough to be put in a comic picturebook, and a remembrance from Contributor Hig in the form of his collected verses, volume 1, number 1, in de luxe printing. Saw a full moon rise over the lake, and pretended it was in my honor; and then went to see a new play, at which I soon found myself ageing perceptibly, altho the audience behaved like a barrelful of kittens.

Had barely recovered from this anniversary when Thanksgiving day swooped down. Was invited to a family feast, and returned to my ivory tower late to finish my Thursday chores.

Must rise betimes today to prepare for the last college football game of the season. Winter is setting in, and I will climb into my Eskimo suit, with all the longies and woolies I can find. After thawing out, will hurry downtown for cocktails and filet mignon with the Press Veterans association.

"I HAVE BEEN FAITHFUL"

When tall, and blond, and broad of shoulder strode
The young lieutenant down the boulevard,
What if my gaze was needle to his north?
What if my heart beat curiously hard?
(I have been faithful to you, corporal, in my fashion).

When battle-bronzed and strong beneath the stars
The captain murmured phrases turned to please,
What if there was a throbbing in my throat?
What if there was a tremor in my knees?
(I have been faithful to you, corporal, in my fashion).

And when the major with his medals smiled
And danced with me, forgetting wars and death,
What if my voice was stymied in my throat?
What if I couldn't even get my breath?
(I have been faithful to you, corporal, in my fashion).

South Chicago's Favorite Fire

Eighty years ago the fate of South Chicago hung by the nose, literally. The community was invaded by the Northwestern Fertilizing company and an accompanying stench that almost drove residents back to their respective fatherlands.

In 1867 the Hyde Park Sun bellowed its disapproval: "This infernal, abominable, and terrific nuisance has blighted and cursed the whole region. Travelers have begun to hold their noses as soon as they touch the lake shore. Every species of abomination has been brought here and piled up in a festering mess of corruption. The company has entrenched itself behind its vested rights and refuses to budge."

The citizens fought valiantly, but the company went about its business until New Year's day, 1873, when destiny intervened where the courts were powerless. Buildings, equipment, and stock burned to the ground, never to rise again. South Chicago was saved by a fire!

LITTLE WHITE HOUSE

In a friendly small town lying low to the west,
With a shy little road in the part I like best,
At a bend in the road where the oaks tower high,
A little white house smiles at all who pass by.

Where chipmunks eat acorns and run to and fro;
A feeding tray's fastened to bay window sill,
Where songbirds come often with many a trill.

It echoes with laughter from over the years,
Rich in good memories, kind to our tears;
Coals glowing red on the hearth make it seem
A place to relax with a pipe and a dream.

Today I am thankful for all that it means,
For moonlight and storm clouds and family scenes,
The little white house with its oaks looking down

Book of Verses by Hig

A collection of verses by this column's contributor Hig is now available in book form—and a smart-looking, decorative little volume it is in typography and decoration. Its title is "Quert Yuiop," which is baffling until you glance at the top row of letters on your typewriter.

Hig publishes this item for the Christmas trade in two editions of numbered copies: board cover, $1.25; paper cover, 75 cents. It contains 22 examples of Hig's gift for humorous rhyming and 11 illustrative designs by Elmer Jacobs. No. 1 of "Quert Yuiop" helped the editor of this column to celebrate his birthday.

The book bears the imprint of the Flaming Press, which means Hig, otherwise Harry John Higdon, 2444 W. 16th st., Chicago.

Mrs. E. W. writes: "When my husband and I were divorced I did not ask for or receive alimony, but he was ordered by the court to pay $5 weekly for the support of our child. He was drafted into the army last summer and stopped making payments. Is our child entitled to any payment from the government by reason of his army service? My former husband contends that our child cannot receive more than $20 a month from him and that if he had to make an allotment it would take $22 out of his pay."

No court order or decree or even a written agreement can limit the amount of family allowance payable to a divorced man's child or children. Because no alimony was sought by you at the time of divorce you cannot now claim anything for yourself. However, the rights of your child have not been surrendered in any way, and a monthly allowance of $42 may be obtained for the child. If the father will apply for family allowance for his child, then you may make application to the Office of Dependency Benefits, Newark, N. J. In making application you should give the full name, rank, serial number, and organization of the soldier. You also will have to supply documentary proof of marriage and divorce and a copy of the child's birth certificate to establish the claim. When the claim is allowed, the soldier will have to contribute $22 a month and the government will add $20 to make up the total of $42.

THE LYMPH SYSTEM

OVER 300 years ago Harvey described the circulation of blood and, since that time, great strides have been made in our knowledge of the vascular apparatus. But there is another branch of fluid transportation that is less well understood — the lymphatic system, which carries certain types of tissue juices from all parts of the body. In some respects this material resembles blood except that it contains less protein and no red blood cells. Digested food, water, and white corpuscles make up the ingredients. It is usually straw-colored but, when rich in fat, is often opalescent.

To describe its origin we must go back to the individual cells which constitute the body. Altho they appear to be packed tightly together, there is sufficient room in between to allow fluid to pass. This liquid plays a vital role in nourishing all the tissues and normally is in a state of equilibrium with plasma which is flowing thru the blood capillaries. It is here that the essential food elements escape from the blood by literally leaking thru the walls and into the solution which bathes the cells. The latter take what they need but the remainder, along with discarded waste products, must find its way back into the circulation. Some are absorbed on the spot and reënter the blood capillaries but others take a more devious route.

Nature has provided another pathway, having its humble origins in these tissue spaces. This is the beginning of the vast network of lymph channels, which become larger and larger as units join together. Ultimately, they form a major highway in the left shoulder region which empties into a sizable vein near the heart.

The lymph vessels have their own filtering machinery so that harmful constituents cannot reach the vital fluid. All along their course are located tiny nodes or glands thru which this substance must pass. In this area we find a certain type of white corpuscle, the lymphocyte, as well as a scavenger cell, the phagocyte. The latter are adept at grabbing bacteria or any solid particles that might enter the system. In the lung they even intercept bits of dust or soot which may be inhaled.

Should infection attack any region of the body, white cells come to the rescue and the germs are withdrawn from the scene via the lymphatics. The nodes usually prevent the passage of these microbes to the blood stream by harboring and eventually destroying them. The victim is aware of this battle by noting an increase in the size of these barriers. For example, in the case of a foot infection, those in the groin become swollen and tender. Should the lesion be located on a hand, this phenomenon is observed in the armpit. With a sore throat, abscessed tooth, or ear condition, the neck may exhibit kernels.

Generalized enlargement presents a different problem. Now and then leucemia, Hodgkin's disease, or infectious mononucleosis is responsible. Should one of these maladies be suspected, blood tests or even removal of one of the glands for microscopic study may be necessary.

Occasionally lymph channels become infected. This is more prone to occur when the disease is overwhelming. Red streaks running up an arm, in an abscess of the finger, indicate involvement of these structures. Should the process become more extensive, the natural fortifications may be inadequate to stop it and the blood stream is invaded. Sometimes many passageways become inflamed and obstruct the movement of lymph, leading to edema such as milk-leg. Filariasis is an example of blockage of the lymphatics by parasites.

Judgment

Pale are the war lords in the dock;
Their day is closing fast.
Stripped of rank and stripped of loot,

What, as they see each other?
Do they hear a Judge from an ancient past,

Change of Mind

Back home in Anaconda, Mont., Mrs. Clinton W. Gail is considered an authority on antiques. Last week she attended the Hobby show in the Stevens hotel and immediately dispatched this message to her family:

"Take care of my old mixing bowl, which I find is worth $8.50. Our everyday drinking glasses are valued at $2 each. Better put the soap dish in the safe; it's a museum piece."

It's Different in Haiti

Down in Haiti we're brutally frank about it all. A Haitian newspaper with a Notice of Divorce marked for our attention just came this way. The notice:

"I, the undersigned, Clotaire Nicolas, advise the public in general and business houses in particular that I am no longer responsible for the acts and actions of my wife, born Carmila Pierre, for cause of adultery. It is my intention to get a divorce."

Overheard

Two sweet looking old ladies sighed raptly as the curtain went down on Pinza in "The Marriage of Figaro" last week. "You know," one began tremulously, "I think I won't miss any more of his performances because he does something to me." The other leaned over and whispered: "I'll come with you, my dear. He does something to me, too."

Distinction

England's bishop of Derby was here the other day, gaiters and apron [cassock shortened for riding horseback] and all, and told the Episcopal clergy of Chicago about the London woman during the dark days of the blitz who, when the bombs came close, tucked her head under the bedcovers and cried, "O, God, our help in ages past." On relatively calm nights, when bombs fell, but not in her vicinity, he said, she merely looked heavenward and cried: "To hell with Hitler."

The Compass Has No Accent

It happened in a Chicago department store this week, bulletins L. H. C.: A woman asked the floor walker how to get to a certain section. He told her it was on the north State [street] side. "Which way is north?" she asked. The floor walker pointed. "I didn't know," the woman apologized. "You see, I'm from Kentucky." "Yes, ma'am," he replied. "In Kentucky it would still be north."

Stuff Like That

A gentleman we know was coming home to Chicago on the extra-fare 20th Century the other day and shared a dinner table with a gaudily dressed fellow, jewels dripping from his hands and tie, who was blowing a new found lady friend to the $2.25 roast beef dinner with cocktails, wine, and liqueurs. The overheard conversation:

Lady—"Are the public schools in Chicago any good?"

Bejeweled gentleman—"No, they are just lousy. What my wife and I want our boy to be educated for is to learn the value of money and to learn 'rithmetic and stuff like that that's worthwhile. The other day the teacher sent us a list of books to buy for him, that cost $7, and one of those books was just a crazy fairy story called 'Swiss Family Robinson.' Gee, was my wife mad! She went to see that teacher and she said to her: 'What we want is for our boy to learn the value of money and you tell us we should buy books that cost $7. How can he learn the value of money if he knows that, when he's only 13, we spend $7 for books just because you say he should?' . . . Yeah, our schools are lousy. They don't learn nothin' worthwhile."

TO HAVE A FRIEND IS TO BE A FRIEND

Chicago, Nov. 19—The American people, I am sure, are getting tired of certain folks who are insisting that we assure Russia of our friendship for her. Since when have we been her enemies? We have aided in saving Russia's very existence [or at least saved additional millions of her soldiers' lives] by coming to her aid when Hitler was at the top of the heap in this war. Only recently we read a list of war supplies and materials sent to Russia—a list that represented a staggering amount of American money, billions and billions of dollars in thousands of tanks, planes, trucks, guns, ammunition, and in food and numerous other war needs, not to mention the great cost and risk it involved to deliver those supplies to the soviet army thousands of miles from America. What other proof is needed of our friendship? A friend in need is a friend indeed.

And now we see an Anglican churchman coming along as a visitor to our city, entertained by none other than Dr. Card, head of the Chicago council of American Friends of the Soviet Union, at Orchestra hall. This visitor tells us that "from the Russian angle the affair of the atomic bomb has been unfortunate: it is felt very deeply in Russia." He is quoted further telling us to "use the opportunity we have at this moment of making Russians our friends—they want to be."

We have, it seems to me, given every evidence of friendship to Russia that any nation could ask or hope for, and the soviet form of government is anything but what we would care to sponsor for her or any people of the world. However, we regard Russia's internal policy as none of our business. We even permit Dr. Card and his cohorts to disseminate soviet propaganda right under our noses. I happen to know. I appeared on the same platform with Dr. Card on two separate occasions in public forums, when Dr. Card tried to defend the soviet side in her despotic treatment of Poland. The house was packed with Communists in each instance, and I had the pleasure of trouncing Dr. Card and his crowd on both occasions—single handed. Any well informed American could have done the same thing. Dr. Card was defending a defenseless cause.

To have friends one must be a friend. If Russia wants to show her friendship to the United States, let her live up to the Atlantic Charter, the four freedoms, and all other commitments made by her when she needed us to survive. There should be no question of our friendship for the soviet union. Our visiting Anglican churchman should know that, and so his tie-up with Dr. Card and the organization he heads should give us plenty to think about.

By the way, who are the friends of the soviet government among the nations of the world, these days? In all her unilateral acts in Europe Russia has flaunted openly every agreement made with us and her allies, and practically dares us to do something about it. When the allies do not agree to her greedy demands—she walks out on us from the conference. What kind of friendship is that? You cannot bulldoze people into being your friends.

Fort Sheridan, Ill., Nov. 10—The failure of congress to end the national emergency at once and get this country back on a peace time basis is most unfortunate, not only for the country as a whole, but also for the members of congress who will have to answer to the people for this failure. By ending the emergency, congress could make sure in the only way possible that every drafted man in the army who wants a discharge will get one in six months. And the ending of the emergency will also end most war time controls and return this country to constitutional government, something we haven't had in America for a long time.

U.S. RECOGNITION DENIED SERVICE PROXY WEDDINGS

Lawyer Charges Federal Ruling Is Unfair

The federal government has refused to recognize the validity of proxy marriages entered into by army and navy personnel and is withholding payments to widows and children of such men, Atty. Thomas MacKinlay reported yesterday. He termed the government's ruling unfair and unjust and asserted he had begun a legal campaign to reverse it.

Acting in behalf of Mrs. Abby Herboth, 2240 Granville av., who was married by proxy to Col. John R. Herboth Jr. in Kansas City, Kas., Atty. MacKinlay asked Gov. Andrew Schoeppel of Kansas and A. B. Mitchell, the state's attorney general, to join in asking for an early decision on the question by the Kansas Supreme court. He estimated that 2,000 proxy marriages performed during the war would be affected.

Herboth Missing in Air Action

Col. Herboth, a former resident of Glen Ellyn and a West Point graduate, was the commander of the 389th heavy bombardment group which bombed in advance of the invasions of Sicily, Italy, and Normandy. He was declared missing in action last April after his plane was downed over Germany.

A daughter, Leslie, was born to Mrs. Herboth last March. Her husband sent her part of his pay until he was lost. Since then she has received nothing, Atty. MacKinlay said. He has been informed by Col. R. H. Bradshaw, director of the finance department of the war department office of special settlement accounts, that a ruling of the controler general forbids payments to widows whose marriages were made by proxy.

Favorable Opinion in Kansas

Proxy marriages are illegal in many states, but there is no statute on the subject in Kansas and many such marriages have been performed there, Atty. MacKinlay said. Parties to the contracts have relied on a favorable opinion by Judge Jay S. Parker of the Kansas Supreme court, which he made while he was attorney general of Kansas. The Kansas courts have never handed down an opinion.

If he is unable to get an early ruling from the Kansas Supreme court, Atty. MacKinlay said, he will go before the United States Court of Claims and seek to have the controler general's ruling reversed.

"Proxy marriages are not like the hasty gin weddings," he said. "Soldiers and sailors who entered them were required to go thru a procedure that took weeks—plenty of time for the parties to make up their minds. In the case of Mrs. Herboth, I have affidavits from 20 army officers that she and her husband were engaged to be married before he went overseas. This was no hasty, ill considered wedding.

Proof of Long Engagement

Under the army's rules, a man who is missing in action cannot be declared dead for 12 months, which in Col. Herboth's case would be next April. If the issue is not decided earlier, Atty. MacKinlay said he would apply then to the Cook county Probate court an ask that Mrs. Herbothd be name executrix of his estate.

Mrs. Herboth's first husband, Lynn E. Carr, a traffic representative of the Northwest Airlines, was killed in November, 1941, in an airliner crash at Fargo, N. D.

CHURCH LEADER TELLS PLIGHT OF LOW COUNTRIES

Head of Brethren Says Food Needed Quickly

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS

Dr. M. R. Zigler of Elgin, head of the Church of the Brethren's service committee, has returned from an inspection of conditions in Belgium, the Netherlands, and Germany. He reports that in some localities, only one child of families of three or four will survive the winter. The church, with headquarters in Elgin, has been sending heifers and blooded bulls to European lands.

Which to Save?

"Which one of three or four children to save is the heart-rending decision many European mothers face today," Dr. Zigler said, as he told the story of exposure, starvation, and disease "which hardly can be imagined here by us." He said that in one city, out of 108 babies born in July, 98 were dead in August. Dr. Zigler himself lost 14 pounds in weight during his few weeks in the Low Countries.

"The 12 millions likely to perish abroad from cold and hunger this winter lend urgency to our appeal to congress for the granting of deficiency appropriations and additional funds for UNRA activities," Dr. Zigler said. "The need is so tremendous that no one agency can possibly meet it alone.

Asks Carload Lots

"Persons of all faiths owe it to themselves to provide token help by sending material aid abroad. It is time for American churches to think in terms of carload lots of goods for relief," said Dr. Zigler, adding that cases of canned soybeans, corn, dehydrated soups, dry peas, and soap may be sent prepaid to the United Church Relief centers at New Windsor, Md., or Modesto, Cal. From these points the relief items will be allocated by material aid committees organized in the various countries cooperatively by the Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant faiths, and the International Red Cross.

Keenan Will Tell Legion of His Tour in Germany

Joseph D. Keenan, vice chairman for labor of the war production board, who recently returned from a tour of the American zone of occupation in Germany, will tell of his trip Monday at a luncheon of the American Legion Advertising post in Hotel Sherman.

Religious News Notes

The Very Rev. Michael J. O'Connell, superior of the Vincentian order, will be celebrant at a Thanksgiving mass for the 50th anniversary of the first graduating class of St. Joseph hospital school of nursing at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow in the hospital chapel, 2100 Burling st. The anniversary sermon will be given by the Very Rev. Comerford O'Malley, C. M., president of De Paul university. Among the 300 guests at a luncheon following will be Susan Crowe, one of the 15 members of the 1895 graduating class. . . . The only hope that can be restored in liberated European lands will depend on the restoration of the churches and revival of things of the spirit; people are oppressed by fear that their lands will be battle grounds between the two great rival and irreconcilable ideologies—communism and American capitalism. This summarized a view expressed by Bishop Alfred E. J. Rawlinson of Derby, England, who has been a guest of Bishop Wallace E. Conklin this week.

The Rev. Paul W. Grimes of West Ridge Community church, chairman of the Methodist Rock River Conference Board of Evangelism, will lead the devotions at 10 a. m. Monday opening the conference on evangelism to be held all day in Chicago temple, 33 N. Clark st. The Rev. Oliver K. Black, representing the Federal Council of Churches will preside at the morning session. At the afternoon session the principal speaker will be the Rev. Dr. Harry V. Richardson, chaplain of Tuskegee institute, who also will speak at the evening session, preceded by Bishop Schuler E. Garth. The keynote of the conference will be home visitation evangelism.

"Atomic Energy—Blessing or Calamity?" will be the topic of the address by Dr. Reuben C. Gustavson, vice president of the University of Chicago, before the Sunday Evening club tomorrow night in Orchestra hall. . . . Prof. Maynard Krueger of the University of Chicago economics department will discuss the crises confronting minority groups tomorrow night in Greater Bethesda Baptist church, 5300 Michigan av., the Rev. Dr. A. Alfred Watts, minister. . . . Col. Robert A. Hoggard, former head of the Salvation Army Training college in Toronto, Ont., will be the speaker next Friday night in the Temple corps, 1512 Madison st. . . . Rabbi Robert Gordis, president of the Rabbinical Assembly of America, will preach at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Rockefeller Memorial chapel, University of Chicago.

The general conference of the Seventh Day Adventist church, meeting this week in Grand Rapids, Mich., adopted a budget of $12,408,188 for 1946, an increase of $1,424,000 over the current budget. . . . The Rev. Dr. William B. Lampe, moderator of the 157th general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, formerly of the Third Presbyterian church of Chicago and for the last 25 years pastor of West Presbyterian church, St. Louis, Mo., will be honored with banquet by the Presbyterian Union of Chicago Dec. 3 in the Central Y. M. C. A., 19 S. La Salle st. The Rev. John A. Lampe, his son, is pastor of Rogers Park Presbyterian church.

Youth Looks Up, the Sunday school radio program sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE over W-G-N and directed by Philip Maxwell, will be welcomed at 8 a. m. tomorrow in Austin Methodist church Sunday school by Dr. William R. Henriksen, superintendent. The Rev. J. B. Martin, minister, will read the Scripture. Marjorie Olson, contralto, will be the soloist, and the Bible quiz will be "The Giving of the Ten Commandments."

Dr. Ruth I. Seabury, educational secretary to the American board of commissioners of foreign missions, will address the Chicago Christian Youth rally tonight in First Presbyterian church, 6400 Kimbark av. The choir will be directed by the Rev. John Magill, pastor of Lake View Presbyterian church. . . . The Lutheran homes for orphans and the aged at Muscatine, Ia., which are subsidized by the American Lutheran church, are planning a $500,000 building program commemorating their golden jubilee. The Rev. S. J. Altpeter, pastor of Zion church, 9100 Burley av., heads the financial campaign in the metropolitan area which begins today to continue thru Dec. 2. There are about 500 congregations in four midwest states, with a communicant membership exceeding 150,000, privileged to aid these Lutheran homes.

Mrs. Ernie Pyle, Widow of War Reporter, Dies

Albuquerque, N. M., Nov. 23 (AP).—Mrs. Ernie Pyle, widow of the war correspondent, died today. Mrs. Pyle, 44, had been in ill health since Pyle was killed April 18 by a Jap sniper on Ie Shima. Her physician said she died of complications arising from influenza. She was married to Pyle in Washington, D. C., July 7, 1925. They had no children.

Gen. Patch to Be Buried Tomorrow at West Point

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 23 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch Jr., 4th army commander, will be buried in private services at 2:30 p. m. Sunday at the United States Military academy, West Point, N. Y. Patch died Wednesday of pneumonia. The body will be flown to West Point tomorrow in the B-25 bomber which Patch used as commander of the 7th army in Europe.

DEATH NOTICES

In Memoriam

ATTIS—Theresa Albano Attis, Nov. 24, 1944.
A light is from our household gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
HUSBAND, CHILDREN, MOTHER, FATHER, SISTER, AND BROTHERS.

BIGGIO—John A. Biggio. In sad and loving remembrance of our dear father, who passed away 13 years ago today.
LOVING CHILDREN, HARRY, FRANK, AND LILLIAN.

CUNIS—Sgt. Robert H. Cunis, U. S. A. In loving memory of our dear Bob, who was killed in Germany one year ago today, Nov. 24, 1944.
Our hearts still ache with sadness,
Our eyes shed many a tear,
God only knows how much we've missed you
At the end of this first sad year.
LOVING WIFE, MOTHER, BROTHER, AND FAMILY.

DELIBERTO—Frank A. Deliberto, nee Dempsey. In loving memory of our beloved husband and father, who passed away one year ago today, Nov. 24.

LOTHAR, ROBERT, JOAN, AND DAVID.

FARLEY—In memory of Robert E. Farley, who passed away one year ago Nov. 24, 1944.
Friends may think of love forgotten
When they see us smile.
Little do they know the heartache
That our smile hides the while.
How often do we tread the pathway
That leads us to his grave,
Where rests the one we loved so well
And whom we could not save.
MOTHER, FATHER, BROTHER, SISTERS, AND NIECES.

FINK—Jack Fink, Ph. M. 2/c, U. S. N.
Two years ago you sailed away
On the U. S. S. Lincombe Bay,
God certainly loved you, dearest Jack,
He beckoned and you didn't come back.
In spirit we are always with you.
MOTHER, SISTERS, AND BROTHERS.

Today with Women

Parties Tonight Will Wind Up Gay Week of Society Events

BY JUDITH CASS

WHITE ties and dinner jackets are getting a strenuous workout this week. Tonight will mark the close of the gayest week of social whirl since the end of the war, with two large parties, the Evanston Junior league's Thrift House ball in the Michigan Shores club in Wilmette and the traditional Misericordia dinner-dance being revived in the Grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel, drawing the lion's share of merrymakers.

The Evanston league's party will have a modernistic Salvador Dali setting. The evening will start for many with a large cocktail party in the club at 7 o'clock, at which the committees will be present. Others will gather first at smaller cocktail parties, among those to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hunsberger, Mr. and Mrs. George Mumma, Mr. and Mrs. William Raub, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Walter.

Buffet supper will be served from 8 to 10. During the grand march at midnight the guests will remove the contributions they will wear to the party for the league's resale shop, Thrift House. Special booths will be provided for those wishing to change costumes at that time. Serving on a special men's committee to supervise the grand march are Morice Maxwell, Elliott Johnson, and Louis Tilden. Michael Putman, husband of one of the provisional members, will serve as master of ceremonies.

Mrs. L. Robbins Kimball flew from Whitney Beach, Fla., to join her husband for the party. Dr. Kimball has resumed his medical practice here now that he has been released from the army, in which he served as a major. However, the Kimballs' apartment in Evanston, subleased before he returned from overseas, will not be ready for them until Feb. 1, and so Mrs. Kimball is commuting temporarily from Florida, where she and their baby have been living. Among the other husbands of members being welcomed home tonight will be George Schulz and DeWitt Davis, who served in the navy.

Other Parties Tonight

The red, white, and blue invitations sent out for the Misericordia party, called a Victory ball, will draw another large group to the Stevens hotel. The dinner-dance is a quarter of a century old tradition with the hospital board, altho Sunday breakfasts were substituted as the board's money making project during the war. Mrs. Ray P. Tennes is general chairman of the party, assisted by Mrs. James B. McCahey.

Dr. and Mrs. Maurice W. K. Byrnes have taken a table of 16 for the party. Mrs. Michael F. McGuire, president of the hospital board, and Dr. McGuire will have a dozen guests, while their daughter, Betty, will be hostess to 26 young persons. The Stuart Colnons and the William H. Lymans are others who will entertain large groups. Money raised thru the benefit will be turned over to the Misericordia Hospital and Infants' home, where needy mothers and their babies are cared for and homes found for the children left there for adoption.

The Saddle and Cycle club's November dinner-dance tonight in the clubhouse will continue from 7 o'clock until 1 a. m.

Cudahy-Cochran Parties

Mrs. Frank E. Wilhelm will entertain at dinner and dancing tonight in the Onwentsia club for Miss Nancy Lee Cochran and Edward A. Cudahy III., who are to be married next Friday. Mrs. George McLaughlin and her daughter, Miss Patricia McLaughlin, will give a kitchen shower tomorrow for the bride-to-be, and tomorrow night Mr. Cudahy and his fiancee will be guests of the Vaughan Spaldings at the hockey game.

Miss Diana Hill will give a cocktail party Monday for Miss Cochran and Mr. Cudahy. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Walker and Mr. and Mrs. John Andrews King will give a dinner for them Wednesday in the Racquet club, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Adams will give a luncheon Friday for the bridal party and out of town guests. The latter will include Mr. Cudahy's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Stearns of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Lansing Hoyt and Michael Cudahy of Milwaukee—Mrs. Hoyt and Mr. Cudahy are cousins of the bridegroom's father; and the Charles MacNeals and the Jewett Todds of Louisville, Ky., old friends of the bride's mother, Mrs. Cudahy Jr. The wedding will be a small one at 4:30 p. m. in Old St. Mary's church, with a reception following in the Casino club. Miss Cochran is a daughter of John L. Cochran.

Coming Events

The woman's board of the Lake Forest hospital is making plans for a showing of special occasion holiday tables and individually designed packages from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. Tuesday and Wednesday in the Onwentsia club. All the merchandise for sale will be from the Trading Post, the little mart in Lake Forest maintained by the board. Mrs. Roger Bronson is in charge of the exhibit, assisted by Mrs. Lester Armour, Mrs. Philip Reddy, and Mrs. Ralph H. Poole, president of the woman's board. Some of the others active in the board's work are Mrs. John B. Kellogg, Mrs. Warner Dennehy, Mrs. Edward K. Welles, Mrs. Albert D. Farwell, Mrs. Richard H. Mabbatt, and Mrs. Farwell Winston.

Invitations are out to two interesting events on the Arts club calendar. Darius Milhaud will give a lecture entitled "My Ballets" at 11 a. m. Friday in the club. A tea Dec. 7 from 4 to 6 p. m. will mark the pening of an exhibition of paintings by the late Marsden Hartley and the late Louis Vivin, both of whom did landscapes and outdoor scenes of their native countries, the United States and France.

One of the functions which M. Henri Bonnet, French ambassador to the United States, will perform during his and Mme. Bonnet's brief stay here next week will be to open an exhibit Friday of paintings by Floyd and Gladys Davis of "Paris, 1945," shown by the International Relations Center and France Forever. The exhibit will be previewed at a tea from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. in the Woodrow Wilson meeting room of the International Relations center.

Beef Is Ample, Pork Scarce as Rationing Ends

Banquet to Celebrate

Two thousand members of the Chicago Restaurant association will celebrate the end of meat rationing at a banquet tonight in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House. High point of the evening will be the burning of the restaurant operators' ration books in a flaming brazier at the speakers' table. Marion W. Isbell, president of the association, added a caution to housewives not to emulate the association, however, for ration book No. 4 still will be needed to obtain sugar.

While all kinds of meat are unrationed today for the first time since March 29, 1943, Chicago housewives will find little change in the meat situation when they visit their butchers. Difficulty may be found in getting all the ham and bacon they want but supplies of beef are reported ample.

Rationing ended at midnight last night for butter and cooking oils, including margarine, lard, shortening, and salad oils, as well as all kinds of meat and canned fish. This action on meat affects only the better grades of beef and lamb and most pork and pork products. Lower grades of beef and lamb and all mutton were made ration free in October.

Housewives have been requested to turn in their red point tokens to their food retailers, who will deposit them in their ration banks.

In announcing the end of meat rationing in Washington, D. C., Agriculture Secretary Anderson said there is an abundant supply of meats, including poultry. Supplies are sufficient, he said, to allow civilians a December consumption at an annual rate of 165 pounds, compared with 145 pounds now and a war time low of 100 pounds last spring and summer.

Anderson's announcement left sugar as the only food commodity and tires as the only nonfood item remaining under rationing programs. Sugar rationing may continue thru most of 1946 but tire rationing is expected to end early next year.

Agriculture department officials said the fats salvage program will be continued. Housewives will receive 4 cents a pound from local retailers but no red points.

O. E. Jones, vice president in charge of sales of Swift & Co., said, "elimination of rationing will have no effect on the amount of meat we have available for civilian distribution at present."

George Eastwood, president of Armour & Co., said, "Consumers will find it difficult for a time to get as much ham and bacon and other pork cuts as they want because the hog supply is only about half as large as it was a year ago, but there are ample supplies of beef."

John Tunzer, field secretary of the Food Retailers of Greater Chicago, warned against overbuying, urging housewives to purchase only for their immediate needs. He said the supply of turkeys and veal is plentiful, with pork, lamb, and beef expected to be "tight" for a few weeks in Chicago meat markets.

Butter demands may exceed the supply for a time because this is the lowest production period of the year, said Russell Fifer, executive secretary of the American Butter institute. But this can be overcome if the government will speed its issue of surplus stocks to the industry, he added.

Fifer said that since early November slightly more than 15 million pounds of butter have been channeled to butter manufacturers for distribution to the civilian trade.

Chicago packing officials believe the increased supplies of pork, now approaching the season of peak production, will more than offset the seasonal drop in beef and lamb.

While beef production is in its usual seasonal slump, the output is not expected to be as light as usual for a winter season because farmers have brought from the range some of the largest supplies of cattle on record to consume the soft corn crop and will sell these within the next few months.

Lamb prospects are the poorest in years. October production was the third lowest in 35 years. But lamb makes up only a small part of the nation's meat supplies and the shortage will not affect total tonnage to any great extent.

Among Those Who Attended Chicago Junior League's Festive Ball

Miss Priscilla Blackett and Melvin Traylor Jr. of New York were among the thousand or more who attended the Chicago Junior league's benefit Chicago and Southern ball Thanksgiving eve in the Continental hotel.

Miss Annie Lawrie Ryerson and her fiance, Capt. Charles N. Breed Jr. of the army medical corps, were congratulated on all sides at the ball as their engagement just had been announced.

Lounge Slipper Collections at Their Gay Best

BY REA SEEGER

Many people buy lounging slippers just before Christmas, not only as gifts but for personal use. Reason: Because the collections are more varied and more complete than at any other time of the year.

Luxury models, the clever new ballet slippers, the newest scuffs with frou-frou effects of feathers and pompons and ribbon, those of metallics, and the shimmering satins are ready for feature foot comfort in the cold winter evenings that must be spent indoors.

The ballet slippers are giddy and young. They're made just like the professional models without a heel. But the materials are certainly different. Check the very dramatic stripes in satin—gold with black, red with green, two shades of blue, and many other combinations. Solid colors also rate a lot of enthusiasm, and the prices are well down to earth despite all the satin glamor.

Fine felt charmers in gay shades of red, gold, and green vie with the felts in pastel colors. Some are completely covered from heel to toe with flashing gold thread embroidery; others, less expensive, have decorative embroidery only on the toes. Plain felts have huge felt roses perched atop of a square toe.

Fleece scuffs and those of fuzzy furs (usually rabbit) are the best protectors against cold ever devised. Some look like huge caverns of high colored fur or fleece; others are made with just the toe half of the super-warm material.

High heeled boudoir mules of frankly luxury materials, such as metallic brocade, featuring either stripes, dots, or Dresden colored florals, top the list of luxury gift models.

Thru the Looking Glass

If you shampoo your hair at home, don't try to cheat on the cleanser. The results of the shampoo are only as good as the cleanser employed, and a cake of soap rubbed over the locks can't do the efficient, thoro work of a special hair preparation. Bar soap is less likely to get the hair thoroly clean and often leaves a soapy, luster dulling film which is difficult to rinse away. Good shampoos generally are not expensive and are an economy in the long run, because they help keep the hair in condition, making the most of its natural beauty.

We've been experimenting with a recent addition to the ranks of cream shampoos and have been vastly pleased with it. It's a lanolated shampoo, generously endowed with that softening agent which does so much to add sheen to the tresses and make them manageable. Soapless, the preparation nevertheless works up a creamy, heavy lather and floats dirt and oil out in a jiffy.

To use the shampoo, wet the hair thoroly and apply only a medium sized dab of cream. Work it all around, rubbing both scalp and locks vigorously. Rinse and apply a second helping of cleanser to make sure that every trace of soil is removed. Give two or three final rinsings, and the hair is fresh and sweet, immaculately clean, with a flattering luster, and brilliant highlights.

A cream shampoo of this type has its advantages, since there is little possibility of wasting it thru overdosing and there is no danger of spillage. This particular one is recommended for either dry or oily hair and comes all dressed up with a nice fragrance which makes it pleasant to use. The perfume is not so strong, however, that any member of the family would object to using it. LOUISE DOOLEY.

Usual Troubles Beset Falcon in His Latest Film

"THE FALCON IN SAN FRANCISCO"

By Mae Tinée

Mamas—and some papas—were milling around in the Grand theater by the hundreds yesterday morning, dragging their moppets up and down the aisles in frantic pursuit of seats.

It was "Pinocchio" and not the Falcon who brought them there, and the youngsters regarded the mystery with the utmost calm. Tom Conway and his stooge, Ed Brophy, are vacation bound in this latest of a series, and death, as you might expect, goes along on the holiday. A child's nurse is murdered on the train, and there are innumerable complications as a result. The suave detective is accused of kidnaping the little girl when he kindly offers to take her to her home. He's thrown in jail, bailed out by a mysterious wealthy woman, and beaten and drugged, suffering all the usual tortures accorded such incredible busy bodies as he.

At least six people are slain, the plot thickens and thickens and never does thin out to any noticeable degree, and some one better provide the Falcon with some new script writers or no one will care where he is.

A Waste of Celluloid

"TOO YOUNG TO KNOW"

"Too Young to Know" is too incredibly bad to waste much time on. It's a completely artificial and maudlin attempt to treat a social problem like a Hollywood fairy tale, tritely and tiresomely handled, poorly acted, and with one of the most sickening endings I've seen in a long time.

Robert Hutton plays a young army flyer stationed in India, who meets a flashy blonde, an old acquaintance, who informs him that his former wife bore him a child shortly after the divorce was final. The baby was placed out for adoption. A flashback reveals details of a quite unremarkable courtship and marriage, with Mr. Hutton being a disagreeable husband, Joan Leslie a cry baby. How they got a divorce is something for jurists to explain. The father decides to track down his chee-ild and blames his wife for the divorce, for not keeping the baby, for not knowing where he was, in fact, for everything except the war.

It's a shame to waste time and money on such tripe.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 23—Cliff Reid will follow "They Were Expendable" with "Story of the Stars and Stripes"—not Old Glory, but the army newspaper, which was published in 10 European countries and read by every GI in the ETO. The tale also will come out in book form in January. Bob Hutton, founder and first managing editor of the paper, and Andy Rooney, its famous roving combat correspondent, have been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to long term writing contracts. Their first assignment will naturally be on the story they helped make in real life. . . . Jinx Falkenburg, just in from New York, called to say she'd been yanked right off Broadway to come back here and play in "The Duchess of Broadway." But with her husband, Tex McCrary, back there and just out of the army, she'd prefer the big street without the "duchess" business. Jinx told that in the Stork club's exclusive Cub room were Spencer Tracy, Joan Fontaine, Ann Sheridan, Danny Kaye, Gene Tierney, and the Sam Goldwyns, all at one time. Move over kids, I'm comin' too.

Really a Script Tease

If you think movie scripts are daffy, here's a real story about a script even daffier. Some years ago Paramount paid $25,000 for a story and tried having half a dozen writers whip it into screen fare. None of the scribes could figure out an ending for it. Then the studio contacted the guy it had bought the yarn from. He said, "How should I know? I got the idea from a German film, but had to leave before it finished. So I'll be darned if the studio didn't buy the German picture just to see how they finished it. . . . Martin Gosch is busier than a bird dog writing "The Ritz Hotel" for the Ritz Brothers. It'll open next fall in Chicago before its New York run. Martin's last experience at Metro, writing an Abbott and Costello picture, would make a funnier play than "Once in a Lifetime," and if he and George Kaufman ever meet up, I'll bet you'll see it on the stage, too. . . . Speaking of Lou Costello, when this gets out, he should be the most popular man in town. He's just started a new apartment house on the strip. With the housing shortage what it is, that should bring him in more fan mail than his acting.

Double Trouble—Almost

For "Adventure in Casablanca" Lisette Verea had a special trick hair-do to catch the public eye. Didn't take long to catch it, for Carole Landis, working on the same lot, came ambling on the set with an identical coiffure. Gals glared, and for a moment the cast thought there'd be one adventure that wasn't in the script. . . . Hear Pan-American Airways has started something to entertain guests in flight—giving previews of latest pictures on 16 mm. films. It's a terrific idea. Wonder when the other lines will latch onto it? . . . Wally Westmore celebrated his 20th wedding anniversary this week. For a Westmore, I'd say that was really something to celebrate. . . . Of all the wacky things! Adolphe Menjou is temporarily out of "Heartbeat" because he tied his shoe laces too tight. One foot swelled to three times its normal size, and he's in bed.

Two More In the Running

Two new candidates for the role opposite Bill Powell in "Life with Father" are Ina Claire and Myrna Loy. . . . Cully Richards, who squired Ann Sheridan before the army got him, is back on the Paramount lot and planning a radio show with his pal, Tommy D'Andre. . . . Leonard Firestone's operation for deafness was completely successful. . . . Sonny Tufts, who plays a left fielder for the New York Yankees in "Strangers in Love," works out every day with Pepper Lee, and old timer of baseball. . . . In "Monsieur Beaucaire" Bob Hope has a duelling scene with Joe Schildkraut, and Joe, being an expert swordsman, was warned by the director to be careful with his million dollar Hope. "What happens if I do run him thru?" asked Joe. "In that case," said Bob, "you'll cut a handsome figure."

Leon Fleisher's First Chicago Recital Lives Up to Ravinia Promise with Orchestra

On the basis of evidence now before the public, the three outstanding young pianists are William Kapell; Leonard Pennario, who has been in the army and unable to press his claim, and 17 year old Leon Fleisher, who made a memorable début with the Chicago Symphony orchestra at Ravinia last summer, and sustained that success last night with his first Chicago recital in Orchestra hall.

No wonder this tall boy from California is Pierre Monteux's protégé. He reflects that gifted Frenchman's attributes of tone so fresh it sometimes reveals hitherto unsuspected loveliness, a rare sense of proportion, a surprisingly comprehensive grasp of style, and a deep, quite instinctive devotion to the integrity of music. He is no prodigy whose flair may fade, but a naturally gifted pianist whose youth means just one thing, that he has a musician's lifetime to develop and strengthen his resources.

I am afraid I am prejudiced in favor of a pianist who begins with Bach. Mr. Fleisher began with the Toccata in D major, which immediately established that fresh clarity of tone that carried thru the recital. It was not dutiful, but beautiful Bach, limpid, clean, and shining. And when he followed it with Mozart's F major sonata [Köchel 332] in a performance which had but one thought, to set forth the music in all its purity of phrasing, so that both serenity and sparkle blended in utterly winning Mozartian radiance, then I was distinctly on Mr. Fleisher's side in any possible argument.

It was rather an engaging idea, in this day when a movie has made the world polonaise conscious, to play Chopin's Polonaise in F sharp minor on the same program with the Polonaise in C major Beethoven once wrote in honor of the Empress Elizabeth of Russia. Mr. Fleisher made it clear that while the one was a polite gesture by a great craftsman, the other had the fire and flame of a patriot speaking his native idiom. I hope to hear him do the best of Beethoven another time. This time the Chopin won out, not only in the polonaise, but in the gleaming beauty of the Waltz in E flat and the murmurous depth of the D flat Nocturne. There was a fastidous perfection about them reassuring in a period when Chopin is a field day for less scrupulous pianists.

After intermission came two crisp pieces by Roger Sessions, a tentative and a peremptory study in dissonance, vividly played. Then the Sonata in B minor of Liszt, chosen only last Sunday by Artur Rubinstein. Mr. Fleisher played it admirably, even affectionately. If he thought it just a showpiece, no one would have suspected.

Notes

The performance of "The Bartered Bride" originally scheduled by the Citizens Opera company for Sunday afternoon in the Ashland auditorium, has been postponed until Dec. 16. The sponsors say they could not call participants to rehearsal because of the telephone strike. . . . Maybe Ballet Theater will get Hugh Laing back in time for our Christmas engagement. His Broadway show, "The Day Before Spring," is termed "an extremely long day" by the New York Times, which disposes of its stellar dancers in one sentence, "Their [the ballets'] chief performers are Hugh Laing and Mary Ellen Moylan." . . . Martha Graham has signed a contract with S. Hurok and will be coming here on a tour to the west coast some time after her January season in New York.

Oriental Touch Given to Paris Winter Clothes

BY ANNE BRUYERE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Nov. 23—Jeanne Lanvin, Maggy Rouff, and Lucien Lelong paraded their midwinter fashions this week and introduced brand new, oriental inspired silhouettes and color combinations.

Picturesque names and designs, recalling Indo-Chinese French colonies, included tongue twisters such as "Quang-Ngai," "Binh-Thuan," "Ban-Muang," and "Kam-Tong-Lai." New fashion ideas included wide, flat Annamite turbans matched with gloves and scarves, barbaric armlets, and wide Oriental trousers for lounging or receiving.

A Mme. Lanvin original in exotic gold, purple, and green stripes had the disciplined lines relieved at the lowered waist by a foot of accordion plaiting used horizontally and a six inch front panel plaited vertically. Her warm wool suits in gray, brick, mustard, and marine were characterized by long tunics belted at the waist. The skirts were a good three inches shorter than the summer styles. Parisians still order their haute couture costumes knee length for sports and dress wear alike

Necklines were high, shoulders well padded, and waists nipped. Jewelry and sequins blossomed on everything from gloves and gilets to formals and glamorous hair-dos.

Most diverting was a black wool coat trimmed with patches of Persian lamb shaped to resemble French poodles.

Clean cut and handsome suits, tailored with watchmakers' precision; exquisitely stitched casuals in luscious new woolens, and elaborate lamé and furbelowed velvet formals appeared in Maggy Rouff's collection yesterday.

Lucien Lelong played up tall figures with slim, silhouette evening topcoats. Fullness was obtained by discreet slits and deep inverted plaits. Other features were high, swathed collars, snug hugging waists, and many interesting details such as blue fox on silver satin; a white worsted chenille vest over a strategically zigzagged wool skirt, and eight tiered, bead stitched tucks on the long, graceful sleeves of a cocktail gown.

Pot roasts hold their own in any kind of weather. They also hold their own with the housewife because they require little attention and are at home with any kind of accompaniment, be it at a party, family dinner, or left-over meal.

Contrary to the belief of many persons, pot roasts are not limited to rump or chuck of beef, but include many other cuts of meat, such as heel of round, blade bone, and the brisket from beef, as well as the round bone, blade bone, cushion shoulder, and rolled shoulder from veal.

The general method for cooking pot roasts is to wipe the roast with a damp cloth, brown it in a heavy pan on top of the range, using a small amount of fat. If the meat is floured before browning, you will get a better color and also have a good beginning for gravy. After browning, turn the heat low, season the meat well, and add ¼ to ½ cup of liquid. Cover the pan and continue cooking 30 to 45 minutes per pound, depending upon the size, shape, and quality of your roast. The liquid will cook off, so replace it in small amounts from time to time. When using your oven for rolls or dessert, make use of it for the pot roast too. A 300 to 325 degree temperature will do the trick.

If you like cranberries as much as we do, you will enjoy this pot roast, and especially now when cranberries seem extra good.

Cranberry Pot Roast

3 to 4 pound rolled chuck roast
Flour
3 tablespoons fat
Salt, pepper
2 cups unsweetened cranberry sauce
1 cup hot water

Dredge the rolled roast in flour, and brown in the fat. Season and pour the cranberry sauce and water over the roast. Cover and cook slowly, adding water from time to time, if necessary. After about three hours in a 325 degree oven, or when the roast is tender, remove to a hot platter and thicken the liquid in the pan for gravy.

The following recipe will serve 12, but if your family is smaller, use the entire recipe and have your meal prepared for another evening.

Pot Roast with Tomato Gravy

4-5 pounds blade pot roast
4 tablespoons fat
1 clove garlic
½ teaspoon thyme
½ cup vinegar
1 cup water
Salt, pepper
1 No. 2 can tomatoes
¼ cup flour

Brown meat in hot fat. Add clove of garlic, thyme, vinegar, and ½ cup water. Season with salt and pepper, cover, and cook slowly [325 degrees] for 2 hours. Add tomatoes and simmer 1 hour longer. When meat is tender, remove to a hot platter. Remove garlic clove if it hasn't been removed earlier in the cooking. Make paste of flour and the other ½ cup water, add to liquid in pan, cook, and stir until smooth and thickened. Serve meat and gravy accompanied by boiled carrots and onions.

To enhance the flavor of veal pot roast, season with 1 tablespoon mustard, 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, pepper and salt to taste, ½ cup diced onion, and 2 tablespoons of vinegar.

The usual pot roast vegetables are carrots, onions, and potatoes. Alter this pattern a bit by adding 1 cup diced celery, 2 green peppers, and 4 tomatoes to the carrot and potato combination. Add the vegetables to the roast ½ to 1 hour before the meat is done.

Principal of Campion Will Speak to Mothers

The Campion Mothers' club, associated with the Jesuit High school, Campion, in Prairie du Chien, Wis., will meet for luncheon at 12:30 p. m. Monday in the Wedgewood room at Marshall Field & Co. The Rev. Mathias B. Martin, principal at the school, and A. J. Kochanski, a scholastic on the faculty, will speak. The program will include a group of songs by Miss Mary Harvey, who will be accompanied by Mrs. William D. Berg.

"With Bated Breath" . . . . . By Alice Campbell

INSTALMENT XVIII.
AGATHA LEAVES TOWN

"Miss Trimble, doctor?" Ada Briggs, dressmaker, blinked at the tall man on her doorstep. "Would you believe it, she nipped out not a minute later than 6 this morning, and here it is gorn 10 and she's not come in!"

What could have taken her out at such an hour, before it had even begun to get light? Mrs. Briggs had no idea. She had looked at her clock on hearing the snick of this front door. Bruce decided not to inquire about the pistol she had supposedly noticed in Miss Trimble's room. He himself had had the story last night over the telephone: but Emily Barkdale was notorious for starting hares.

"She can't have fired that shot," he reasoned, driving rapidly to the hospital. "It won't fit with the letter—unless she was telling Maud she meant to put a bullet thru her own head, which we've no reason to suppose she's done."

Yet the authentic bullet had been fired, passing a bare couple of inches from an innocent girl's brain! That was the knowledge which tormented.

Sister Fowler said, "I'm afraid, doctor, there's been a slight hitch about getting the appendix patient prepared. Do you mind if Dr. Grew just had a look at the young man I've got waiting in the out-patient's surgery? He realizes it's after hours, but as he does seem in considerable pain—only a minor injury, Dr. Grew will be finished well in time to give your next anesthetic."

"Tell him to go ahead, I've a small job of my own to do."

The small job took Bruce to the minute laboratory and consumed only a small portion of the interval between operations. His first test had borne fruit; but what fruit! If he handed this analysis result over to the woman who demanded it, would he, after all, be spiking her gun? Would he not, by sheer irony, be playing straight into her cold blooded hand?

Slowly, in sober appreciation of the cleft stick he was in, he sat down, drew a sheet of notepaper toward him, and began to indite the curt communication which would bring his vigilance over Erica Bolles to an abrupt end.

The date was what? October 27. Now, as he wrote, he was merely thinking it an odd circumstance that two women had risen early to go out into the gloom of a raw daybreak—and that one of them had at 10 o'clock not yet returned. A second idea came to him. Why so early in Maud's case, when the Fullers lived so near.

A remote possibility turned him cold, and it slunk at his elbow thruout the entire day, until seven that evening found him on Ada Briggs' threshold, where Ada herself was just fitting a latchkey into the front door.

"Oh, Miss Trimble's sure to be in now, doctor! We'll just tap. Now then, whatever's gone with her new suitcase? It was a-standing here by this wall."

Bruce pushed into the erstwhile parlor, to see the landlady hurriedly opening drawers.

"Fancy," she gasped. "The little minute I've bin out, if she hasn't come home, packed most of her belongings and cut off without saying a word! I suppose this'll mean she's failed."

Confused, the seamstress stammered, "In—in whatever it was she was hoping to bring off. If she didn't succeed, she was leaving Wyrforde straight away and I was to keep hold of her big trunk till I was told where to send it. What train can she be catching? There's none till . . . O, Peggy, you did give me a jump!"

Ada's waitress daughter spoke from the dark hall. "Gone, is she? I was coming along to tell you, I've this minute seen her getting into the Cheltenham bus."

A vast load slipped from Bruce's shoulders.

It was Ethel, the new housemaid, who gave the news of Miss Trimble's departure. She had learned it from Peggy Briggs. Undoubtedly, then, Maud must know. Since the extraordinary scene at the breakfast table not one reference had been made to the alleged attack from the hedge or to the Bandy episode. But the door to the Black Hole had been nailed up.

The bang of Robin's hammer still dinged in Avis' ears when she was greeted by more hammering coming from Erica's room. Erica, on all fours by the wooly hearthrug, was pounding away vigorously at the heel of an old shoe!

"O, Miss Erica, you can't do that," Avis cried. "What happened, did it come off?"

"All my heels come loose. Ossie's mended this one once, but just now on the roof steps I caught the horrid thing and nearly fell. I've two pairs at the shoemaker's now, Maud simply won't hear of my buying new."

"Well, you can't trip about in these," she declared. "Robin will run them along to the shoe shop. No, I'll do it myself."

"Robin," Miss Erica hesitated. "Is his foot really bad?"

"Hurting him a lot," Avis told her. "I bullied him into getting a car to take him over to the hospital. He's got an elastic bandage, but he can't walk or pedal a bike just for a few days. That silly little accident," she pointed ominously, "came from just stumbling over a couple of these miserable extra steps. That's why you can't afford to run risks. I'm now going to examine all your shoes."

There was a neat row of shabby footwear in Erica's bedroom wardrobe. Had Agatha Trimble been Erica's one efficient protectress?

"Miss Erica, did you know Miss Trimble has gone away?"

A small sound issued from Miss Erica's open mouth. The tidings had jolted her. "To Cheltenham," Avis added. Erica smiled, "So that's it," she whispered. "It means she'll come back."

Avis carried her paper parcel of Erica's shoes down to the coat cupboard, and slid into her camel's hair coat. Her bicycle would be quickest, but suddenly she thought of Robin's dog pining for a run. Round she circled to the shed, only to bring up short. Robin, whitefaced, and palsied, was kneeling by a black inert form!.

"Is — is Shelia sick?" she quavered, certain in her own mind the spaniel was already dead. Robin didn't answer, and just then the new maid came flying up the basement steps with a cup of warm mustard water. Robin snatched it. "I've go to make her sick," he gritted. "You raise her head."

Poor dog, she couldn't swallow. Between them they pried open her unresisting jaws and poured down the emetic. She lay then, barely quivering.

Kitchen Pointers
By Mary Meade

"What temperature should be used to preheat an oven?"

Start the pie at a high temperature to set the crust before the filling can soak into it. Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes, then reduce the temperature to 350 degrees and bake 30 to 40 minutes longer, or until the pumpkin mixture is firm. The crust may be pricked and prebaked for five minutes in a hot oven before the filling is added. Still another precaution is to brush the unbaked shell with beaten egg white.

"How can I make a smooth gravy?"

When meat is cooked without the addition of other liquids, add the flour directly to the fatty drippings and blend over moderate heat until thoroly browned. Then add cold water, a little at a time, stirring constantly. When a pot roast or other meat is cooked with water, the flour must be added in a paste. To make a paste, add enough cold water to flour to blend smoothly. Add water to the liquid in the pan, then add the paste gradually, stirring constantly over moderate heat. Bring to a boil and boil two or three minutes.

Surprise Croquettes

[Makes eight]

3 cups mashed sweet potatoes
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons butter
8 marshmallows
Flour
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon water
¾ cup finely chopped nuts

Combine warm potatoes, seasonings, and butter, and beat until fluffy. Shape into balls with a marshmallow in the center of each. Roll in flour, then in egg beaten with water, and lastly roll in nuts. Fry in hot deep fat, 375 degrees, for 3 to 4 minutes, or until golden brown. Drain on unglazed paper and serve hot.

Parties Tonight Wind Up Gay Society Week

of St. Chrysostom's church, Miss Gretchen Eisenhardt of Chicago, daughter of Mrs. August William Eisenhardt of Kelsoe, N. D., will become the bride of Gilmer V. Black, son of Mrs. Arthur D. Black of Evanston. Mrs. Eisenhardt is here for the wedding, as are her son-in-law and daughter, the Fred Eisenhardts. Mr. Eisenhardt will give his sister in marriage, and she will be attended by Mrs. Robert E. Loomis of Cleveland Heights, O.

Mr. Loomis, Mitchell D. Follansbee Jr., Robert C. McNamara Jr., Bertrand Goldberg, James H. Rogers, and Willis O'Rourke will usher. Geoffrey Garsten of Wilmington, Del., a former Princeton classmate of Mr. Black, will be best man. After a wedding trip Mr. Black and his bride will be at home in Chicago. He recently was discharged from the marine corps.

At a family gathering Thanksgiving day in their home in Evanston, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Walter White announced the engagement of their daughter, Mary Emeline, to Clifford Eugene Hoenk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Hoenk of South Bend, Ind. Since her graduation from Wellesley college, Miss White has been associated with an investment counsel firm in Boston, Mass. Her fiancé attended De Pauw university and the University of Notre Dame. A former chief warrant officer in the naval reserve, he recently was released from the service after more than four years of duty in the Atlantic and Pacific.

Here and There

Carolyn Marie Weber, the first child of the John Hanley Webers [Barbara Grubb], who was born Nov. 18 in Illinois Central hospital, bears the names of her two grandmothers, Mrs. Joel F. Grubb and Mrs. Grable B. Weber. The baby's father arrived two months ago from the Pacific and has been released from the naval reserve, in which he served as a lieutenant, junior grade.

A "make believe cottage" and playroom for girls who live in the Evanston receiving home for the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society will receive its official "housewarming" at an open house and tea from 4 to 7 p. m. tomorrow, to be given by the north shore advisory board of the home. Mrs. Melvin L. Wagner and Mrs. John E. Barlow, two members of the board, helped to create the gay little room to look like a playhouse. Many of the hand painted flowers and figures along a picket fence were done by Lucia Patton, celebrated children's artist. A dozen members of the Evanston Junior league, under the leadership of Mrs. Sheldon Fox, completed the decorating. Mrs. E. Royce Armstrong is chairman of the board of the receiving home. The society is a private child placement agency responsible for the welfare of dependent children of this state.

A cocktail party the Fielding L. Marshalls will give at home tomorrow, following a showing of Mrs. Marshall's colored motion pictures of Canada at 2:45 p. m. in the Chicago Historical society, will be a farewell party. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall are leaving for New York next week, from where they will go to Jamaica and other points south. They will not return until May.

Domineering Has a Lasting Effect on Child

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Recently we talked about the serious effects upon children of a dominating mother. And we said that children so dominated have no defense, except when they can support themselves. But even if your children when they become old enough, do leave home, that will not remedy anything. It will be too late then, not only for you who will have lost them, but for them. The harm will be done, because you already will have warped their personalities, and changed their attitudes toward life.

I know of a number of cases where a dominating mother has done permanent harm, altho, of course, a father can be dominating, too. But the cases I happen to know of personally concern only mothers of that ilk.

If you think the following stories seem extreme enough to be fantastic, I can only tell you that they are true:

Two men, in different families, do not dare to marry the young women they have been going with for years because of their domineering mothers. Both are in their late 30s.

Another man and a woman [brother and sister], both gifted and personable, only dared to marry their fiances when they were in their 40s. And then the mother, after having a "heart attack" over each marriage, forced each one to live half the year with her, away from their respective spouses!

In another family the daughter of 13 is so dominated and supervised that, tho brilliant, she has become a serious problem in school and, as a result of her helplessness and frustration at home, resorts to strange acts which are a subconscious revenge, such as setting fire to the new chintz draperies in her mother's room, letting a new coat chosen by her mother [in a color she didn't want] get left out in the rain on the back porch, and lying, to mention only a few.

So I could go on and on, giving instances of the serious harm that such parents do their children; and more and more as the children grow older.

That we must, in general, assume authority over our children's daily acts, and have some vision in planning for them, goes without saying. But to dominate every thought and act; to watch with eagle eye and direct every move they make; to make their decisions for them; in a word, to dominate a child completely is for him a dangerous and cramping thing.

Grandmothers to Give Benefit Party Tomorrow

The Grandmothers' Club of Chicago will give a benefit tea and card party at 3 p. m. tomorrow in the North ballroom of the Stevens hotel. Proceeds will be divided between the Sister Elizabeth Kenny Infantile Paralysis Foundation and the Chicago service centers for the purchase of Christmas turkeys. The party is open to guests.

Children's Styles

Beruffled, puffed sleeved dresses for the small fry are not only attractive, but they're easy to make. The romper, style No. 3012, is designed for sizes from 6 months to 3 years. Size 2 requires 1¼ yards of 35 inch material and ⅝ yard of ruffling. The dress, cut from the same pattern, requires 1⅝ yards of 35 inch material and 1¼ yards of ruffling. The princess line dress, style No. 3013, is designed for sizes 2 to 8. Size 4 requires 1¾ yards of 35 inch material; ¼ yard contrasting fabric, and 3½ yards of braid trim.

Order Clotilde patterns from Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Annex, NEW YORK CITY. Print name and address; state size. Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing. The fall and winter fashion book, on sale at Tribune Public Service offices, is 15 cents; 12 cents if ordered by mail with a pattern.

Retiring Nurse to Be Honored by Auxiliary

The Woman's auxiliary of Wesley Memorial hospital, at a meeting Monday in the Chicago temple, 77 West Washington st., will honor Miss Florence Olmstead, a Wesley nurse who retires from service on Dec. 1. The meeting is set for 10:30 a. m., and Mrs. B. O. Lovejoy will preside.

Entice Swain Into Learning How to Dance

BY SHEILA DALY

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

You may be one of those rugged young individuals who believe that a fellow can't be a speed demon on the gridiron, rate No. 1 on the basketball team, bowl a mean score, and still make with the light and fancy footwork when it comes time to make his feet go to music. The big and brawny pose is all well and good, but when the parties and proms roll around, a gal will look first for a date who feels more rhythm than that necessary to execute a football play.

on the SOLID side

"The boy in the case is a well built, very attractive young Joe, almost all a gal could want for a perfect date. But you'll notice I said 'almost.' Altho he's loads of fun, has a wonderful sense of humor, and is as cute as they come, he doesn't dance. This might not be so bad if I didn't consider a perfect evening one spent dancing. He's already a senior—don't you think it's about time he learned?"

Indeed it is! And you're just the one who can teach him! Most fellows don't have an inherent dislike of dancing, but more often just never got around to learning. And that's where you come in. The process will be less painful if you make the lessons festive affairs. Ask two or three couples to your home for the evening, supply music in one form or another, and set about dancing, showing the fellow the basic steps, helping him to feel the rhythm, and letting him practice with you.

If one or both of the other fellows are also novices at this dancing business, he'll feel less uncomfortable. And do supply some hearty food to keep up their strength during the evening. With that enticement they'll be back for more, and just watch how fast they'll learn to move those feet around!

Engagements

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold S. Norum of Lincolnwood announce the engagement of their daughter, Rose Marie, to Harold Nelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Felix G. Nelson, also of Lincolnwood. Miss Norum is a student at Northwestern university. Her fiancé recently was released from the army air forces after 22 months in the Pacific. He will resume his studies at the Illinois Institute of Technology.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Zeitlin of Dallas, Tex., formerly of Chicago, of the engagement of their daughter, Gladys, to Dr. Theodore C. Zeman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Zeman of Chicago.

Mrs. Sophie Byczek of Short st. announces the engagement of her daughter, Dolores Elizabeth, to Sgt. Charles F. Spring Jr. of the marine corps reserve, son of Mr. and Mrs. Spring of Keokuk, Ia. Sgt. Spring is stationed at the marine air base in New Bern, N. C., where he is awaiting a discharge from the service.

Inquiring Camera Girl

By Maryon Zylstra

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting question submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by Art Kreitzer, 5127 Laflin st.]

THE QUESTION

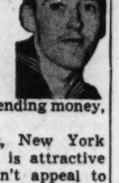
What kind of girls do you shy away from even tho they are attractive?

WHERE ASKED

Chicago Service Men's Center No. 1, 176 W. Washington st.

THE ANSWERS

Seaman George A. Miller, Ada, Okla.—Girls who are eager to get married right away will never snare me. You can be sure you're not the first guy she's tried to hook if she's that kind. I've nothing against getting married, but I don't want any girl proposing to me before I know her. I avoid girls of that type.



Seaman Forrest Spriggs, Glendale, Cal.—No matter how attractive a girl is I wouldn't spend five minutes with her if she doesn't know what's going on in the world. She must know about current events, football games, and sports. Another type I stay away from is the girl who puts on an act for the benefit of every one.

Pvt. Ed Miller, 2035 N. Hermitage av.—A girl who is too conscious of her beauty will never get my permanent attention. I dislike a beautiful girl who likes to see how many men she can have chasing after her. I like a moral, decent girl who has a heart and realizes there's more to beauty than a beautiful face and figure.

Pvt. Robert Davis, Phoenix, Ariz.—There's one kind of apparently appealing girl who doesn't appeal to me at all. She's the girl who plays hard to get. Then when you don't chase her she starts chasing you. I feel that if some one wants to go with me, she should say so and if she doesn't that's all right, too.

Seaman W. Thinglum, Wells, Mich.—A girl who is walking around on the streets obviously looking for a date or hanging around in a bar unescorted is one kind of a girl that I stay away from. And, of course, I avoid a girl who is a gold digger. If she can't have a good time without spending money, she is not for me.

Pvt. Frank Schultz, New York City—Even tho a girl is attractive she doesn't appeal to me if she is haughty and unfriendly. A girl can smile and be sweet without being forward. Another kind I dislike is the girl with a sophisticated ego. She knows she's beautiful and shows it. An unattractive girl is beautiful if she has personality.

SCHURZ BATTLES TILDEN FOR TITLE TODAY

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 23—For the first time since 1941, the Orange Bowl football game in Miami, Fla., Jan. 1, will be preceded by the colorful New Year's eve parade. . . . Florida's centennial celebration will be the theme of the program. . . . Contemporaries claim Charley McCarthy, famous Brown university full back of the 90s, was the first player to make a quick kick in college football. . . . McCarthy, later a nationally known law librarian in Wisconsin, held down the first string full back job for the Bruins, altho he weighed only 135 pounds. . . . The history making kick occurred in the 1895 duel with Dartmouth, in which, because of injuries to another player, McCarthy was forced to shift to quarter back. . . . The team's punter, he booted the ball from directly behind the center, to the understandable amazement of the Indians. . . . Jimmy Meehan, Chicago golf professional, is now in Hines hospital for treatment of injuries suffered in World War I. . . . Overwork in a defense plant aggravated Jimmy's condition. . . . Art Stolkey, 6 feet 1 inch forward who captained the University of Detroit's 1942-'43 basketball team, has received an honorable discharge from the army and has returned to school. . . . Stolkey, who scored 302 points for the Titans in three years of play, will be the fifth Titan letter winner to bid for a berth on the 1945-'46 quintet. . . . The others are Jack Richardson, a discharged navy trainee; Al Vagnette, Joe Pulte, and Gene Malinowski. . . .

"If you'd give me my choice of the two best football players in the United States, I'd take the top line backers every time;" says Coach Bo McMillin of Indiana university. . . . Now that the Southern association has been given a double A rating, the wage of official scorers will go up from $5 to $7.50 per game. . . . Claudia Young, twin sister of Claude [Buddy] Young, is a track star at Chicago's Roosevelt college. . . . Sgt. Mario [Motts] Tonelli of the Chicago Cardinals, on convalescent leave from the army, expects to receive his discharge shortly after reporting back to Gardiner General hospital on Jan. 28. . . . Paul Erickson, the Cub pitcher who stayed on his north side milk route long after the team started training last spring, has returned to his off-season calling. . . . He is expected to join the first migration of battery men to the west coast in February. . . . Catalina Island is a little more attractive than French Lick Springs. . . . Bob McKinley, Northwestern's star freshman half back, never had played regular football before he arrived on the Evanston campus. . . . In high school at College Springs, Ia., he engaged in six man football. . . . Connie Mack hopes to spend the winter in St. Petersburg, Fla., if he can find lodgings. . . . Buddy Lewis, Washington Senators' outfielder, has formed a motor sales company in Gastonia, N. C. . . . Two stars of the Air Transport Command eleven at Nashville, Tenn.—Full Back Ed Ehlers and Tackle Frank Wyde—are seeking West Point appointments.

So Well Remembered
[For Sister Maurice, R. S. M.]

And asks for Sister Maurice at the school,
"O, sister isn't here these many years,"
A young nun answers, "It's the Order's rule
That teachers shall retire when they have been
In schoolrooms for so many years, you know,"
"Why, yes, of course," the father answered then,
"I'd forgotten that it's been that long ago."

"She was the grandest person," he went on,
"Altho we didn't realize it then,
But looking backward to those far-off years,
Down the misty halls of 'Way back when,'
We now can understand her proper worth,
And how she set our footsteps on Right's way.'
So I wanted Damien to have her, too,

L'Envoi

Tho teachers pass as all must pass in time,
We all of us will one day come to find,
They go, but deep within our hearts,
—Jazbo of Old Dubuque.

Alabama in Bowl

THE University of Alabama football team last night accepted an invitation to play in the Rose bowl game at Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 1. The west coast representative has not been chosen. It will be the Crimson Tide's sixth appearance in the Rose bowl. [Story on next page.]

BY EDWARD BURNS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 23.—It may be the biggest in Indiana university's football history, this day that will be dawning in a few hours. Most years, as everybody knows, the winning of the Old Oaken Bucket, beloved trophy of Indiana-Purdue football competition, is glory enough for all the sweating, drilling, bruising and buffeting entailed in a Hoosier football season. Tomorrow, tho, Purdue still will be the Hoosiers' outstanding rival—and much more. Victory, or even a tie, will mean Indiana's first Western conference title in history—and the Hoosiers have been in the league for 46 years.

Purdue has been vitally coöperative in helping set up tomorrow as a day of superlative Hoosier triumph. If Purdue had not beaten Ohio State early in the season, the Hoosiers would not be alone on top going into the final game of the season. However, beyond loaning its tarpaulin to the Hoosiers and guaranteeing to show up here in plenty of time for the game, the spirit of coöperation in the hearts of the Boilermakers now is stone cold.

Name Bucket Brigade

For quite a while this campaign the Boilermakers thought they would be 1945 champions themselves, but Northwestern jolted and Michigan wrecked that sweet dream. Disappointment does not mean anything resembling forfeiture, or even a smidgen of concession, in the minds of the Boilermakers. Purdue, billeted in Indianapolis tonight, is eager for the match. Custodians even have been delegated to tote the Old Oaken Bucket to Lafayette.

The game will be the 48th in a series which started in 1891. The Hoosiers have won 17 times, including a 14 to 6 success in Lafayette last season. The Boilermakers have won 25 times and five of the engagements have ended in ties.

Tomorrow will be time enough to write of individual performances. The brilliant records of the two lines and the two sparkling back fields are so outstanding that all fans in the state and many in the nation know about the ramming of the forwards and the yardage of the Hoosiers' George Taliaferro, who has gained 629 yards; Pete Pihos, who has gone for 360 yards, and Dick Deranek, who has averaged 12.2 yards per try.

Isbell Is Optimistic

In view of the prospective weather conditions [the forecast calls for sub freezing temperature and possibly snow] Coach Cecil Isbell's usually genial Texas smile was somewhat frozen this afternoon as he contemplated the chances of the pony Purdue backs being able to hold their footing. However, the youthful Boilermaker football professor, violating all pre-game rules of the coaching profession, still insisted, "I'll be disappointed if we don't win."

Isbell certainly has something in the way of a back field combination. Bill Canfield, 165 pound left half back, "distinguished student" and son of a Purdue professor, leads the conference in total offense and pass receiving and is tied for the scoring lead. Ed Cody, full back, tops Big Nine ball carriers on average running gains from scrimmage per game, and Bob De Moss, Isbell's freshman passing protege, is the league's leading aerialist.

The Northwestern university Wildcats and the Illini of the University of Illinois, both of whom claim they survived the last week only because of a bountiful supply of arnica, will make a valiant effort this afternoon in Dyche stadium to observe the passing of the Western conference football season.

At stake in the game starting at 1:30 p. m., the kick-off time having been moved up for visibility purposes, will be a possible fourth place tie for the Wildcats and a chance at fifth place for the Orange and Blue in the final conference standings.

Of course, the winner also will have to pay hauling and 12 months' storage charges on Sweet Sioux, the cigar store Indian trophy that will be in competition for the first time in the lengthy series which is about to record its 39th game.

Deserve Favorites' Role

Some of the Wildcats will be interested in more than figures on touchdowns this afternoon. Half Back Dick Conners, for instance, is involved in the individual scoring and rushing statistics. He has 24 points to his credit but will need a big day to match the 36 now held by Bill Canfield of Purdue and Ollie Cline of Ohio. In the rushing department Conners is second with an average of 5.1 yards in 78 plays. Tom Cates of Minnesota leads in this particular line with a 5.5 average.

Aerial Defense Effective

Another Wildcat who has a personal account on which to work is Jim Farrar, the quarter back, who is third among conference passers with 20 successful pitches for a percentage of .392. Maybe Farrar doesn't know it, but the Illini aerial defense is pretty tricky, having given up an average of only 34 yards per game to enemy tossers. Farrar's passing also concerns Capt. Max Morris who is topped as a catcher only by Canfield of the Boilermakers.

Willie Joyce Beats Barnum in 10 Rounds

BY FRANK MASTRO

Willie Joyce, Golden Gloves product from Gary, was awarded a unanimous decision over Joey Barnum of Los Angeles in a 10 round bout in Chicago Stadium last night. Referee Norm McGarity voted 53-47 and Judges Harold Marovitz and Ed Hintz each scored 52-48 for Joyce.

The attendance fell below that of the Stadium opener last Oct. 19, when Barnum held the more experienced Joyce to a 10 round draw. Last night the crowd totaled 7,015. Gross receipts were $33,120.

O'Neill Bell, Detroit welterweight, knocked out George Costner of Cincinnati in the seventh round of a 10 round semi-windup. Costner was also down in the sixth round.

Joyce Fights Back

Barnum took the lead in the first round as a result of a left and right to the jaw. Joyce took the next two rounds, however, on his superior punching. In the second Joyce landed a left to the jaw and another to the body. Barnum scored with a

New Orleans, La., Nov. 23—The largest crowd ever to attend a regularly scheduled football game in the south will watch Notre Dame play Tulane here tomorrow. More than 65,000 tickets have been sold and with clear, cool weather in prospect, officials predict the throng will approach 70,000. The biggest previous football gathering was 51,000 for a Tulane-Alabama contest in New Orleans before the war.

Even the weatherman is coöperating with Tulane executives, the chamber of commerce, and New Orleans residents in their hospitality to the Irish. The temperature during Notre Dame's workout this afternoon was 62 degrees.

Hospitality Pleases Devore

"Gee, this is perfect," said Hugh Devore, acting head coach of Notre Dame. "It's like one of our Indian summer days in Indiana. I was afraid we would run into one of those heavy, sultry week-ends for which New Orleans is famous. This will pep up my gang. Tell Monk Simons [Tulane coach] he may be carrying his hospitality too far."

Devore brought 40 players, including John Panelli, full back whose injuries in the army game probably will keep him out of competition the rest of the season, to New Orleans.

The great interest in tomorrow's game is a tribute to the popularity of Notre Dame, which already has attracted overflow crowds this fall in Cleveland, New York, Atlanta, and Evanston. Tulane has one of its poorest records in years. It has won two games, tied one, and lost four. However, one of its victories was a 14 to 13 upset of Mississippi State, which has lost to nobody else.

A Leahey at Tulane

Tulane will start four who were members of the 1944 team that lost to Notre Dame, 26 to 0. They are the guards, Gaston Bourgeois and Elliott Ingleheart; Full Back Marvin McCain, and Tackle Leroy Schneider. The squad's best running back is Dick Hoot, a navy R. O. T. C. student who last year played with Villanova. The top passers, around whom much of Tulane's hopes for victory are centered, are Ernie Crouch and Bill Leahey. Just how a Leahey made his way to Tulane is being investigated by Frank Leahy, who came with the Notre Dame squad to familiarize himself with the prospects for 1946 when he will resume command of the university's football forces.

Devore has been obliged to shift his ends for tomorrow's game, because of the transfer of Bob Skoglund, who had been the regular left wingman until he was transferred to Great Lakes a few days ago. Dick Cronin, a right end, has been moved to the other flank and Bill Leonard, 200 pound freshman, will start at right end.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 23—Michigan and Ohio State, Western conference football rivals for 48 years, will meet here tomorrow afternoon in the final battle of their season before a capacity throng of 85,132. Annually these rivals are accustomed to set attendance records for they possess the two largest conference stadia.

Tomorrow will be no exception and the crowd theoretically will equal capacity but it is no means certain that all these fans will be present. Last night's show, while less than 2 inches deep, blanketed Michigan's huge bowl and additional flurries and subfreezing weather today has postponed attempts to remove the snow until tomorrow morning.

Ticket Manager Has None

Andy Baker, the Wolverines' ticket manager, still was receiving calls this morning for accommodations no longer available. By game time, however, the supply certainly will exceed the demand, altho the university will have none for sale. Tickets are not redeemable.

While the weather was the No. 1 topic of conversation, the tenseness at Michigan's athletic offices reflected the Wolverines' anxiety over the outcome of the battle. Last year the Buckeyes won the conference title by whipping Michigan, 18 to 14, in the most thrilling contest of the 1944 campaign. Tomorrow, Michigan can eliminate the champions, altho the Wolverines themselves then will not gain the title unless Purdue assists by trouncing Indiana.

Work Out in Snow

Ohio State's varsity arrived at the Dearborn Inn before mid-afternoon and immediately proceeded to Ann Arbor, where the squad worked out in snow covered Ferry field, altho Fritz Crisler, Michigan's director of athletics, offered to have the cover on the gridiron at the bowl removed.

Coach Carroll Widdoes reported his regulars in condition with Bud Kessler, who has had a severe cold, prepared to play at left end, altho he probably will not start. Jack Weisenburger, Michigan's full back, who was injured last week, will not play, Crisler said tonight. Instead Don Dworsky will start at full back for the Wolverines.

Michigan Holds Big Edge

Michigan's football series with Ohio State started in 1897. Forty-one games have been played and Michigan has won 26 games and lost 12. Three ended in ties. The teams have met annually since 1918 and have alternated in winning since 1941, when the Wolverines ended a four year domination of the Buckeyes.

BY DAVID CONDON

Tilden Tech, defending co-champion and victor in three championship games in the last four years, will meet Schurz High school, north section winner, in Soldiers' field this afternoon for the 1945 City league football crown.

The kickoff is scheduled for 1:30 o'clock, one half hour earlier than last week's semi-final contests, and this, plus the promise of sunshine and a temperature of about 40 degrees, is expected to lure almost 20,000 into the lake front stadium.

The 20,000 is expected to be comprised of not only rooters for Tilden and Schurz, but for Austin, which shares the crown with Tilden but which must count on a victory by Schurz to retain its co-championship. This situation has been created by the system in which the league disposes of tie games in its playoffs.

Austin Hopes for Schurz Victory

Last year, Austin tied Tilden, 7 to 7, but lost a chance to play in the finals by the flip of a coin. Tilden won the championship game, with Austin sharing the honor.

This season, Austin again played a 7 to 7 tie in the semi-finals—this time against Schurz—and if Schurz wins today, the eleven coached by Bill Heiland again will claim part of the honor, glory, and cash receipts.

In fact, so enthused has Heiland been about retaining the share in the championship that he placed the Austin eleven at the disposal of Schurz, and the Bulldogs scrimmaged against Austin during the last week, Austin running off Tilden plays so that Schurz might be better prepared for today's assignment.

All-State Stars in Lineups

Meanwhile, Coaches Chuck Harvey of Tilden and Fred O'Keefe of Schurz have hailed the promised rise in temperature, even as slight as it might be, as promising for good performances by Bill Gay and Mike Swistowicz, hard running Blue Devil backs, and Dick Redman and John Miller, breakaway runners from Schurz.

Yesterday, Gay, Swistowicz, and Redman were named on the all-state eleven, which should indicate the calibre of performance expected today. Redman, along with Miller, paced Schurz to the north section title, while Gay and Swistowicz are veterans who were outstanding on the 1944 Tilden eleven which defeated Weber, 13 to 7, in the Kelly bowl.

Each Has Strong Line

Each eleven boasts a strong line which has succeeded in opening holes for the backs as well as holding down the opposition. Tilden's line particularly is effective on defense. The only mark against Schurz this season is the Austin tie, while Leo of the Catholic league dealt the Blue Devils a loss in a practice game. Since that encounter, Tilden has been undefeated.

The victor in today's contest meets the winner of tomorrow's Catholic league championship game between Fenwick and St. Ignatius, in the Kelly bowl game in Soldiers' field next Saturday.

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 23—The Minnesota Gopher and the Wisconsin Badger, a couple of lowly fellows on the Big Nine totem pole, meet in Memorial stadium here tomorrow in their 55th annual football game.

Despite the strikingly base estate of the once all powerful University of Minnesota eleven, the equally unpretentious record of the University of Wisconsin outfit, and the prospects of near zero weather, a crowd of between 35,000 and 45,000 is anticipated for the occasion.

Bernie Bierman, coach of the Gophers, and Harry Stuhldreher, the Badger leader, always hesitant in predicting the outcome of Western conference games in which their teams participate, are downright reluctant to call the turn of tomorrow's clash.

Badgers Rated Favorites

The Badgers rule seven point favorites, however, despite the fact that they, like the Gophers, have won only one conference game and their 28 to 14 loss to Northwestern doesn't compare too favorably with Minnesota's 30 to 7 triumph over the Wildcats.

In the opinion of observers who have seen both lines operate, there isn't much to choose between Minnesota's Judd Ringer, Bob Fitch, Bob Runkel, Warren Beson, Larry Olsonoski, Tom Reinhardt, and Bob Carley and Wisconsin's Jim Thompson, Rex John, Wray George, Hal Faverty, Del Hanke, Clarence Esser, and Jack Mead. Two of the Badgers, George at left guard and Faverty at center, are not in the best of shape, but will play part of the game.

Badgers Have Back Field Edge

Wisconsin's back field rates a decided edge with the speedy Jerry Thompson at left half and Don Kindt at right half. Ken Parent and Pat Rooney will carry on at those positions for Minnesota. The Gophers have a margin in the passing department if Dick Lawrence is able to go the route. He's quite a pitcher.

A couple of inches of snow and ice weigh down the tarpaulin that covers the gridiron, but there is the possibility that the field will not be too hard tomorrow unless the weather man's prediction of 10 below zero tomorrow night comes true a few hours earlier.

Joyce continued to pile up points in the next three rounds. Willie was the aggressor in the fourth and fifth. Barnum scored with a right to the chin in the fifth, but caught a right to the jaw in return. In the sixth a cut on Barnum's left eye was reopened, but he countered with a left and right to the head. Joyce then landed two rights to the jaw.

Joey Refuses to Retreat

Joyce added to his lead in the seventh and eighth rounds, but in the ninth Barnum made a punching bag of his opponent. He counted with two rights to the chin and scored in close with lefts and rights. Joyce missed with a right and fell into the ropes as the round ended. It was all Barnum in the tenth.

Jerry Pittro, Chicago middleweight, scored a fourth round technical knockout over Pete Leno of Cincinnati in a scheduled six round opener. Marty Collura, Milwaukee welterweight, pounded out a decision over Pete Ferrand of South Chicago in five rounds.

Rush Plan for U. of Illinois Sports Arena

Action toward construction of a 2 million dollar health and physical education building at the University of Illinois, with seats for 18,000, was taken by the university's board of trustees at a meeting in the University club yesterday.

The board appropriated $80,000 for the preparation of plans and specifications. This work is to be done by the Chicago architectural firm of Holabird and Root. The money was made available by Gov. Green recently from the general assembly's appropriation for a statewide system of public works projects.

No Date Chosen Yet

Date of the start of construction was not indicated. It was pointed out that the progress of the plans depends on a number of factors, not the least of which is the availability of materials and labor. The need for other public construction also will have an effect.

In addition to needed space for the university's health and physical education program, the building will provide a new home for the university's basketball games and the Illinois High school basketball tournament finals, as well as facilities for state conventions and other large public gatherings.

Huff Gymnasium Outgrown

University officials pointed out that the university now has no place large enough to accommodate such gatherings as the annual farm and home week and the Illinois American Legion convention. Huff gymnasium, now used for Illinois' home basketball games and the state high school tournament, seats only 7,000 persons and its acoustics are notoriously poor.

The trustees also approved contracts for the restoration of the old gymnasium on the campus, used by the navy signal schools as a training ship during the war.

DAY TAKES LEAD IN MATCH WITH BUDDY BOMAR

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 23 [Special]—Ned Day took the lead against Buddy Bomar in the opening block of their 28 game match by winning six of seven games rolled on Day's home alleys in West Allis tonight. Day averaged 224 per game, Bomar 207. It was the highest average Bomar has made against Day in West Allis. Another block will be rolled here tomorrow night before the match moves to Chicago and Bomar's home alleys. Last night's scores:

Day....202 211 266 206 244 209 230—1,568
Bomar.185 206 205 205 229 217 206—1,453

ARMED HEADS FIELD TODAY IN PIMLICO RIGGS

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 23 (AP)—Armed, Calumet farm thorobred which ran away with the Pimlico Special last week, can lay a strong claim to 1945 handicap honors by winning the $25,000 Riggs handicap tomorrow at Pimlico.

Sharing the spotlight on the same program will be the $25,000 Pimlico Futurity, a mile and a sixteenth event that in past years has helped label the juveniles most likely to succeed when they campaign as 3 year olds.

The names of nine 2 year olds headed by Maine Chance farm's Star Pilot, victor in the Ardsley, Hopeful and Belmont Futurity, were dropped in the entry box for the Pimlico Futurity.

NELSON KELLOGG, FORMER PURDUE DIRECTOR, DIES

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 23 [Special]—Col. Nelson A. Kellogg, 64, died today at his home near Central Lake, Mich., after a prolonged illness. Kellogg, a track star at the University of Michigan, served as athletic director at the University of Iowa before World War I., and was director at Purdue university from 1919 to 1932. He went from Purdue to a similar position at Lehigh university, where he served until his retirement six years ago. Services will be held here Monday at 1 p. m.

Rex Weyant Resigns as Yankees' Road Secretary

New York, Nov. 23—(AP)—Rex Weyant resigned as road secretary of the New York Yankees today. No successor was named by President Larry S. MacPhail, head of the syndicate which purchased the Yankees from the heirs last summer.

FORMER PITCHER DIES

Cleveland, O., Nov. 23 [AP]—Richard T. Carroll, graduate of Cleveland's sand lots and pitcher for the New York Yankees in 1915, died here today. After reaching the big leagues in 1915, Carroll later managed Brooklyn in the old Federal league.

PICK ALABAMA AS EAST'S TEAM FOR ROSE BOWL

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 23—(AP)—The University of Alabama today was officially named as the eastern representative in the Rose Bowl Jan. 1.

Vic Schmidt, Pacific Coast conference commissioner, and Willis O. Hunter, chairman of the Rose Bowl committee, said Alabama had accepted the invitation to play in the 32d renewal of the annual New Year's day classic after "serious consideration had been given to the possibility of inviting undefeated Army."

Delay Eliminates Army

Hunter said that Army authorities informed the committee that they would be unable to give an answer until after the Army-Navy game Dec. 1, and that the committee believed it would be unwise to delay the selection of the eastern representative that long.

It will be Alabama's sixth appearance in the Rose bowl, the most for any eastern visiting representative. The Crimson Tide's Rose bowl record is three victories, one defeat and one tie.

In 1926, Alabama beat Washington, 20 to 19; in 1927, played a 7 to 7 tie with Stanford; in 1931, defeated Washington State, 24 to 0; 1935, beat Stanford, 29 to 13, and finally was beaten in 1938 by California, 13 to 0.

1935 Team Greatest

The 1935 Crimson Tide, featuring the amazing pass combination of Dixie Howell and Don Hutson, still is regarded here as the greatest visiting team to perform in the Rose bowl.

This year's Alabama aggregation, sailing along on the accurate passing arm of Harry Gilmer, has romped to seven straight victories and earned comparison with the 1935 team.

With two more games—Pensacola Navy tomorrow and the strong Mississippi State on Dec. 1—remaining on its regular schedule, Coach Frank Thomas' team has amassed the following all-winning record: Keesler field, 21 to 0; Louisiana State, 26 to 7; South Carolina, 55 to 0; Tennessee [last year's Rose bowl loser], 25 to 7; Georgia, 28 to 14; Kentucky, 60 to 19, and Vanderbilt, 71 to 0. Alabama has totaled 286 points to its opponents 47.

The Crimson Tide's Coast conference opponent probably will be decided by the Southern California-University of California at Los Angeles game on Dec. 1.

SUGAR BOWL SET?

New Orleans, La., Nov. 23 (AP)—With Alabama going to the Rose bowl, the Sugar bowl game here on Jan. 1 may pair Oklahoma A. & M. against Louisiana State or St. Mary's.

It is pointed out that Oklahoma A. & M., currently No. 6 in the Associated Press poll of outstanding teams, is the "most logical" single choice available, since none of the first five clubs except Alabama will accept a bowl bid. Of course, the Aggies must win their game with Oklahoma university tomorrow.

St. Mary's is ranked No. 9 and one segment of local opinion has contended the Gaels were "signed" by the Sugar bowl some weeks ago. This has been denied by members of the bowl committee.

ARMY SAYS NO

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 23 [Special]—The question of Army's possible participation in any post-season bowl football game appeared definitely answered in the negative today. Earl [Red] Blaik, the Cadets' coach said there will be no more competition for the undefeated Army eleven after the traditional service feature with Navy in Philadelphia, Saturday, Dec. 1.

HOLY CROSS IN ORANGE BOWL?

Miami, Fla., Nov. 23 (AP) — The Miami Herald said tonight that Holy Cross and the University of Miami "are heading for a date in the Orange Bowl New Year's day despite lack of confirmation." Holy Cross officials declined to comment, stating they must wait until after the Boston college game Sunday.

Miami defeated Michigan State, 21 to 7, tonight to continue its best season during which it tasted defeat only once in nine games when Georgia won, 27 to 21. The team was tied by South Carolina and has yet to play Auburn and the University of Havana.

MARQUETTE FIVE BEATS CARROLL COLLEGE, 46-23

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 23 [Special]—John Millunzi, absent for three years while he served in the navy, returned to a Marquette university basketball uniform tonight and led the Hilltoppers to a 46 to 23 victory over Carroll college. Millunzi scored 18 points. Lineup:

PRICE INCREASE DENIED STEEL FIRMS BY OPA

Review of Decision Later Promised

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23 (AP)—OPA today refused to grant higher ceilings on steel, price increases that industry leaders contend are necessary before they can discuss wage demands of their CIO employes.

Price Administrator Bowles said there was "no cause at this time for a general increase in steel prices," but that he would review the plea early in 1946. For a small part of the industry, perhaps 45 small non-integrated concerns suffering financial hardship, Bowles indicated some price increases may be granted soon.

United States Steel corporation, bellwether for the industry in wage and price matters, has said it must have higher prices before it can grant any part of the CIO United Steel Workers' demand for a $2 a day wage increase.

Refuses to Negotiate

It twice has turned down government requests that it resume stalemated negotiations with the union, saying the talks would be useless in the absence of price action.

The union, contending no price increase was necessary, has scheduled a strike vote for next Wednesday in 766 steel, iron, and aluminum plants employing a total of 600,000 workers.

A spokesman for the corporation said it will reserve comment until the general steel products industry advisory committee meets in Washington a week or 10 days hence to confer with Bowles and discuss his statement.

General Counsel Lee Pressman of the union said he "didn't know" whether the union will hold off strike action until after the year-end, when OPA again will take up the price case.

Action Rests with Committee

The calling of a steel strike, potentially a drastic blow to reconversion, will be up to the steel workers' policy committee once the strike vote tally is in, said Pressman.

Bowles promised the price situation will be "reviewed promptly and carefully" when the financial returns of steel companies were submitted after Jan. 1. He said that under standards set by congress, price increases must be granted when needed to permit an industry to earn the returns it did in a "representative peace time period," usually 1936-'39.

Study of figures submitted by the steel companies disclosed "that the industry's earnings for the first nine months of 1945 are well in excess of this standard, and that based on current operations they would be in excess of this standard for the full year 1945," he said.

OPA "could not properly" alter prices on the basis of the profit showing made in the "short, confused, and abnormal" period immediately after V-J day, Bowles explained.

HOLIDAY BUYING LIFTS COUNTRY'S RETAILER SALES

New York, Nov. 23 (AP)—Increased food buying before the Thanksgiving holiday plus early Christmas shopping raised the country's retail sales last week 9 to 13 per cent above a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

"Altho many items for Christmas gifts were reported scarce, fill-ins were used," the report said. "Food volume rose about 10 per cent."

MASTER ELECTRIC

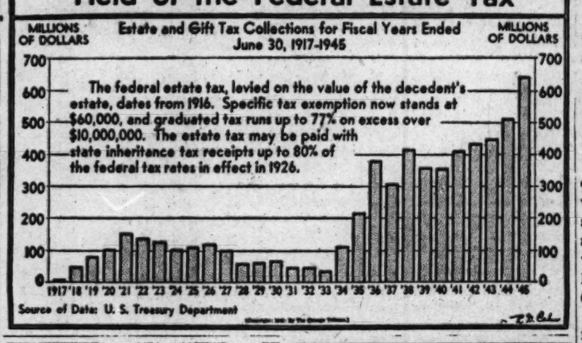
Electric motors manufactured by the company, ranging from 1/10 to 150 horsepower, are used in a variety of applications. The types include gearhead, electric brake, explosion resisting, and multiple and variable speed units. Master Electric also makes generators, vibrators for vibrating concrete, machine drives, electric hoists, a device for variable speed requirements, thermostatic heat regulators, and stoker controls for domestic use.

Sales rose from less than 4 million dollars in 1939 to a war time peak of $16,199,000 after renegotiation in 1943. Renegotiated sales last year were $15,099,000. Presumably the war time sales level cannot be maintained, but the prospects are believed to point to long term growth of peace time volume.

Share earnings on the 249,932 shares in the first nine months of 1945 were $1.59, compared with $1.85 a year earlier; and for full years: 1944, $2.05; 1943, $2.13; 1942, $2.95; 1941, $3.86; 1940, $3.18. The average for the four years ended with 1939 was $2.07 as adjusted to the present number of shares. Dividends, paid each year since 1932, have been at the yearly rate of $1.40 since 1942. Funded debt as of last Sept. 30 was $2,625,000, and net working capital, $5,284,000.

Yield of the Federal Estate Tax



New Federal Order Curbs Trade in Rye

The department of agriculture yesterday cut the daily trading limit in rye futures to 500,000 bushels as a further curb on speculative trading in the relatively scarce commodity. The restriction becomes effective Dec. 3.

The Chicago Board of Trade last week limited the open interest in December and May rye of any one trader to 250,000 bushels, but he was permitted to buy or sell up to a million bushels daily so long as his new commitments or net holding were not in excess of the open interest limit. The new federal order cuts the Chicago daily trading limit in half and also affects July and September contracts—1946 crop deliveries which are curbed by price ceilings.

Hedging Operations Uncurbed

The department of agriculture order does not affect bona fide hedging transactions against holdings of cash grain. Such operations are not considered speculative.

Grain futures prices were irregular yesterday. Selling by holders of December rye sent the price down 4¾ cents a bushel at one time to $1.81¾, off 15 cents from the high early in the week. A fair rally late brought the close to $1.83½, a net loss of 3¾ cents. May rye was 2¼ cents lower. July held at the ceiling price and September was off 1½.

Oats Turn Lower

Oat prices rose early, but finished ⅛ to 1 lower. December and May wheat and all deliveries of corn were unchanged at ceiling prices. New crop deliveries of wheat lost ⅝, and barley was unchanged to ¼ higher.

Trading in corn futures was at a standstill and only a few lots moved at ceiling prices.

OUTPUT BEGINS ON NEW TYPE OF BANTAM AUTOS

Chula Vista, Cal., Nov. 23 (AP)—Production of road test models of a new type bantam car weighing less than 600 pounds has been started by the Bobbi Motor Car corporation, S. A. Williams, president, said today.

He said that the tests are scheduled to begin in January, with an ultimate annual output of as many as 75,000 units contemplated. The body will be of plastic, altho the chassis is of tubular steel construction, and steel structural members surround the passenger space. Three models are planned, a two-passenger roadster, two-passenger commercial car, and four-passenger sedan.

Known as the Bobbi-Kar, the vehicle will be powered with a two-cylinder air-cooled motor and will have no clutch pedal. Williams estimated that with minimum production of 15,000 cars annually the sales price could be between $490 and $590.

RFC WILL SELL SURPLUS AUTO PARTS TUESDAY

The Chicago surplus property office of the Reconstruction Finance corporation will offer for sale next Tuesday in the La Salle hotel more than 2,000 used automotive engine assemblies, axles, steering gears, and transmissions. The property may be inspected at the war department ordnance service command at 45 W. 24th st.

Transit Board Seeks to Buy Bus Company

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK

The governing board of the Chicago metropolitan transit authority, which has made offers to buy the surface and elevated lines and operate them under public ownership, voted yesterday to open negotiations looking to the acquisition of the Chicago Motor Coach company.

Philip Harrington, board chairman, appointed three members—Philip W. Collins, Irvin L. Porter, and James R. Quinn—a committee to learn whether the bus line owners would be willing to sell and at what price.

If an agreement is reached, Harrington said, the purchase money would have to be raised by the sale of revenue bonds and an engineering appraisal of the property would be necessary before such financing would be possible.

Outside of Court Control

Both the surface and elevated lines are in bankruptcy and the sale of these units must be made thru the federal District court. The offer to the street car owners is 75 million dollars and to the "L" is 12 million plus. Motor Coach, a solvent company not under court jurisdiction, has been valued at 6 to 12 millions.

The authority plans to knit the three major companies into one.

Werner W. Schroeder, counsel for the board, told the members of a recent decision of the Illinois Supreme court validating the act creating the authority. He said that it upheld the authority in every respect; that revenue certificates would not create any city tax obligation and that they would not be taxable as to interest.

Vote $7,500 Fee to Attorney

The board voted approval of a bill rendered by the attorney of $7,500 for services since July 2.

The board elected John Quincy Adams vice chairman after adopting a set of rules and by-laws. It also received from Harrington a tentative budget of $131,000 for 1946.

Hearings on the valuation of the surface and "L" lines are to be renewed next Monday in the federal District court of Judge Michael L. Igoe. Some junior investor groups have maintained the surface lines offer is inadequate and unfair.

INDEX OF WHOLESALE PRICES RISES TO PEAK FOR NEARLY 25 YEARS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23 (AP)—The department of labor said today its index of wholesale prices rose 0.2 per cent last week to reach the highest level since January, 1921.

The index at 106.3 per cent of the 1926 average was 0.8 per cent above a month ago and 2.1 per cent above a year earlier. It was 29.6 per cent above the corresponding week in 1937 and 13.7 per cent higher than in November, 1929.

Higher prices for agricultural commodities again were chiefly responsible for the advance, which continued an upward movement which started in mid-September, the bureau of labor statistics explained.

Average prices for farm products rose 0.6 per cent in the week to a level 2.7 per cent higher than four weeks ago. The food index advanced 0.2 per cent, and butter quotations again rose, reflecting adjustments to higher ceilings.

Don't Give Up on Hotel Room —Here's a Hint

Thousands of transient room seekers have obtained accommodations in loop and outlying hotels thru the efforts of the Greater Chicago Hotel association's housing bureau. L. B. Ermeling, secretary-treasurer of the association, yesterday described the bureau's work while a reporter observed its staff in operation.

A typical request for help was that of a woman, baby in arms, who had arrived to meet her soldier husband. Unable to get a room, she telephoned the association. The bureau named three hotels where rooms were available. Thirty minutes later she telephoned her "thanks" for accommodations.

May Resume Seven Day Week

Prior to September, 1943, the bureau operated only during "rush periods," Ermeling said. Since then, however, it has been in regular operation because of the heavy demand for rooms. The bureau discontinued Sunday operations when the government banned large conventions, but may resume a seven day week.

Three phones used almost exclusively for incoming calls are manned from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m. In an average week approximately 500 long distance calls, several times as many local calls, and 100 telegrams are received.

The bureau concentrates its attention on requests for immediate placement. It makes a continuing survey of the hotels, which also phone the bureau when they have vacancies. It refers callers to hotels, rather than making reservations for immediate placements.

Furniture Buyers Ask Rooms

Out of town requests for future reservations are filled as rapidly as possible. The bureau already has received more than 400 letters from buyers seeking rooms for the furniture show which begins Jan. 7. Requests have arrived from all parts of the United States and Canada.

The bureau refers callers to 85 hotels, not all association members. When Chicago hotels are filled, transients are referred to hotels in suburbs and near-by towns.

The five day old strike of telephone workers, eliminating all except "emergency" long distance calls, has relieved pressure on the bureau at the moment.

STOCK MARKET PRICES RECEDE, TRADE SHRINKS

Specialties Resist General Trend

New York, Nov. 23—(AP)—Scattered specialties achieved modest gains today, but most prominent stocks extended their retreat by fractions to more than 2 points in a generally declining market.

Comforting to bullish traders, however, was the lack of real selling pressure. Dealings slackened after a fairly active opening and transfers of 1,350,000 shares were the smallest for a 5 hour trade since Oct. 30.

Belief that more of a "technical correction" of the swing to 14 year average peaks was likely caused the further trimming of accounts. Part of the sluggishness of trade was attributed to the decision of many customers to stretch their Thanksgiving holiday thru the week-end.

Shamrock Oil Rises Again

Among various bearish factors were the General Motors strike, threat of a national telephone walkout, refusal of the office of price administration to grant a steel price boost at present, and another drop in frate car loadings.

The Associated Press 60 stock average declined 0.7 to 74. Of 932 issues appearing, 569 declined and 195 advanced. Earnings, dividends, and inflation prospects persisted as supporting factors.

Exceptions to the downturn at tops for 1945 or longer were Shamrock Oil, again buoyed by news the head of a major petroleum company had obtained an option to purchase control; Warner Brothers, National Supply, Electric and Musical Industries, and Hupp Motors.

RAIL BONDS DECLINE

New York, Nov. 23 (AP)—The bond market moved irregularly lower today as selling in rails increased. Exceptions included International Hydro-Electric 6s, which ran up 3½ to 96 on a petition seeking court approval of a settlement with International Paper company.

Reflecting proposed rail reorganization law changes, Milwaukee railroad 5s of 1975 again were weak, losing 3½, and the adjustment 5s gave up 1½, both in sizable trade. Rock Island 4s fell 1¾ to 90½, Rio Grande Western 5s lost 1½, and smaller declines were posted by issues of the Katy, Missouri Pacific, and New Haven.

CHICAGO LIST DIPS

Prices dipped in turnover of 40,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. More active losers included Central and South West Utilities, down ⅝, and Chicago corporation, off ¾. Admiral rose ⅜ and Automatic Washer and Asbestos Manufacturing both finished unchanged.

PHILCO PROFITS TAKE BIG DROP IN 3D QUARTER

Philco corporation net earnings in the third quarter fell to $202,342, or 15 cents a share, from $990,714, or 72 cents a share, a year earlier, John Ballantyne, president, said yesterday. Sales were 45 per cent below second quarter volume, reflecting large scale cancellation of war contracts, he said.

"Resumption of civilian production has been somewhat slower than anticipated largely as a result of delays in obtaining deliveries from suppliers and subcontractors," said Ballantyne. "Present indications are that the third quarter marked the low point in our reconversion program, and production of civilian radio receivers and refrigerators is increasing at an encouraging rate."

Spencer Kellogg & Sons reported profit in the fiscal year ended Sept. 1 was $1,520,767, or $2.49 a share, against $2,160,824, or $3.54 a share, in the preceding year. A 3 million dollar expansion program will include a 2 million dollar soybean processing plant in Bellevue, O., on which construction has begun.

CANADIAN FIRM BUYS SURPLUS DOUGLAS TOOLS

A large tonnage of surplus work in process and tooling in the Douglas Aircraft company plant in Park Ridge was sold yesterday by the army air forces to Canadair, Ltd., of Montreal, Que., for approximately $800,000, the AAF disclosed yesterday. The Canadian company was high bidder on the material.

The price offered was $200 per ton for the partly completed planes, and $40 a ton for the special tooling, which included jigs, fixtures, and dies.

It was explained that United States aircraft producers were little interested in the unfinished parts and the tools. Most of the domestic bidders made proposals to buy only small parts of the surplus.

Rail Credit Corp. to Make New Liquidating Payment

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23 (AP)—The Railroad Credit corporation will make a liquidating distribution of $362,134 on Dec. 15, equal to ½ per cent of the corporation fund, President E. G. Buckland announced today. He said $347,650 will be paid in cash and $14,484 credited on carriers' indebtedness to the corporation. This will raise distributions to $70,082,386 or 95½ per cent of the fund contributed by carriers in 1931 as a depression measure to permit railroads in difficulties to borrow at low interest.

PEOPLE AND EVENTS

Billy B. Van's brand of human relations in industry brought a Vermont war plant, Fellows Gear Shaper company, the lowest absentee record in the country, the highest bond buying record, and a production level that was never permitted to "get down to normal," he said yesterday in an address before the Executives' club. Van, who retired from the show business 15 years ago, used a plant radio system to broadcast music pleasing to the workers and often to mark special events in their lives — birthdays, weddings, new babies. There never was talk of a strike and the workers never indicated a wish to organize a union, he said.

Stanley M. Ford has been appointed general sales manager of the Chicago Electric Manufacturing company, appliance producer. He was sales manager of General Electric company's heating device division for five years prior to service in the WPB consumer durable goods division, and later entered the marine corps.

Mayer, Altheimer & Kabaker, attorneys, announced that Benjamin A. Ragir, until recently tax counsel for the United States alien property custodian, has become a partner in the firm. He will specialize in federal and state taxation.

The Claud S. Gordon company announced appointment of H. M. Munson as manager of its newly organized industrial instruments division. He formerly was with Manning, Maxwell & Moore.

S. W. Sparrow, director of research of the Studebaker corporation, will address a dinner given by Western Society of Engineers Monday at the Museum of Science and Industry. Members of the society will visit automobile exhibits at the museum under the direction of Maj. Lenox R. Lohr, who also will speak at the dinner.

The Chicago Association of Commerce and the Industrial Training Directors' association will sponsor a reconversion problems school on employing and training veterans under the GI bill of rights next Friday in the La Salle hotel. Five representatives of the veterans' administration, the Illinois board of vocational education, and industry will speak.

Maj. Maxwell A. Goodwin has returned from the army to his former position as Chicago division manager of the tructractor division of Clark Equipment company.

The Chicago section of the American Society of Lubricating Engineers will hear discussions of standardization in lubricants and in turbine oil maintenance systems at a dinner Wednesday in Huyler's restaurant. New officers will be elected.

Opinions Vary on '46 Volume of Financing

Spokesmen for leading Chicago bond houses yesterday made conflicting predictions regarding continuation of large volume corporate bond financing beyond Jan. 1. Altho several firms expected a noticeable decrease, one forecast at least maintenance of present volume.

Predictions of a decline were based principally on repeal of the excess profits tax, effective Jan. 1. Under present tax laws corporations may charge off as a business expense all financing costs, including registration and the premiums paid on bonds which are called.

Law Change Dims Incentive

With repeal of the excess profits levy, rates of which ranged as high as 95 per cent, this tax advantage disappears. The spokesmen explained that the tax "made it cheap to do outside financing," and that the incentive "won't be as strong" after repeal.

Repeal also will permit companies to retain a larger portion of their earnings, reducing the need of debt or equity borrowing, it was said.

The house which forecast continuation of present bond financing expected fewer utility issues on the market, but believed this would be offset by increased industrial and railroad offerings. This condition should prevail for several years, it was said.

Differ on Refunding Volume

Whether future bond financing will be carried on to refund present issues or pay for expansion programs also was a matter of disagreement.

Several investment bankers expected refunding issues to be dominant. They said companies in need of outside capital would obtain it thru preferred or common stock financing rather than incurring debt because of the present ready cash market for stock issues at this time.

One house, however, took the view that the market would be evenly divided. It held that funded debt financing was benefiting from present low interest rates and that such borrowing may become even more desirable if rates continue to decline.

BIG LIVE STOCK SUPPLIES SELL FIRM TO HIGHER

Chicago hog receipts yesterday totaled 25,000 head, the biggest Friday run since January, 1943. It was the biggest total for a November Friday in four years. Lower temperatures and snow in the hog producing belt helped swell the supply.

Packers again paid the $14.85 a hundred pounds top for barrow and gilt hogs and $14.10 for all packing sows and stags.

Altho the sheep run of 7,500 was largest for a Friday since early June, prices for lambs ruled strong to 15 cents higher. The $15.15 top set a new 16 week high, 65 cents above last week's close.

Cattle receipts of 3,000 were largest in three weeks for a Friday. All offerings sold steady to strong.

CHINESE RATIFY BRETTON WOODS FINANCE PACTS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23 (AP)—Treasury Secretary Vinson said today he had been advised by the Chinese embassy that the Chungking government had ratified the Bretton Woods agreements. China is the first nation or state in addition to the United States to sign the pact of July 31, 1945, to stabilize international currency and to provide an international bank for reconstruction and development.

Tentative action toward national approval has been taken by Cuba, the Philippines, the Union of South Africa, Venezuela, and Yugoslavia. Sixty-five per cent of the participating powers eventually must sign the agreement to make it effective.

REED SUBMITS RAIL CONTROL BILL TO HOUSE

Earnings Records Made a Factor

BY LAURENCE BURD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23—Legislation to require the immediate return of railroads which are in reorganization to control of their stockholders, under certain conditions, was introduced in the house today by Rep. Reed [R., Ill.].

The bill would make it mandatory for federal courts to terminate railroad reorganization proceedings under section 77 of the federal bankruptcy act, when a carrier's earnings meet certain conditions. One is that earnings in the last seven calendar years were sufficient to pay bond interest and other fixed charges.

Reed said earnings statements on file with the interstate commerce commission show that these roads, among others, would be handed back to their owners under his bill: Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific; Western Pacific, Missouri Pacific; St. Louis and San Francisco; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, and New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Asserts Stockholders Suffer

The Illinois representative, who is an outstanding congressional expert on bankruptcy law, has contended that under many pending railroad reorganizing plans, the interests of stockholders are being unjustly frozen out or reduced in the proposed new capital structures.

Reed said this injustice results partly from the fact new capital plans in many cases were drawn years ago when earnings were low. Another factor, he said, is the widespread use of stockholders' voting trusts, under which a few trustees purport to handle the owners' interests.

Earlier this week he offered a bill calling for a full inquiry by the house judiciary committee into all pending railroad reorganization plans, and asking federal courts to suspend action on current railroad cases pending completion of the inquiry.

Offers Time for New Plan

The bill offered today would give railroad stockholders 18 months, or such further time as the court grants, to negotiate with creditors a new capital reorganization, without intervention by the court or any bankruptcy trustees.

Reed said a major reason for long delays and heavy expense under section 77 reorganization proceedings is the "apparent requirement that the parties deal at arms length."

"There seems no opportunity for negotiating a compromise which would otherwise be expeditiously consummated," he said. "The situation has been further complicated by the spectacular improvement of the earnings and cash and debt position of railroads in reorganization.

"Immediate return of these properties to their owners will benefit the public by hastening reconversion and affording employment. I have never been a believer in operation of properties by the courts."

K. C. SOUTHERN ISSUES AUTHORIZED; ICC GETS BURLINGTON REQUEST

The interstate commerce commission yesterday authorized the Kansas City Southern railway to issue 40 million dollars of 4 per cent first mortgage bonds and 6 million dollars of promissory notes sold last month, subject to ICC approval. Proceeds will be used to help redeem 5½, 4½, and 3 per cent bonds and 3 and 2½ per cent promissory notes.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad asked approval of 50 millions of new bonds to finance redemption of parts of 4½ and 4 per cent first and refunding issues on which tenders will be invited.

Benjamin Lewis & Co. is offering $73,000 of 4 per cent waterworks revenue bonds of the Town of Newport, Ind., priced to yield 1.50 to 3 per cent.

NEW VARIETIES OF OATS BOOST YIELDS 40 PCT.

New varieties of oats, especially the Clinton variety, developed by the federal government and the states of Illinois, Indiana, and Iowa, will increase yields 40 per cent over older varieties in common use, Prof. J. C. Hackleman of the University of Illinois crops extension department predicted yesterday. He said the increase will exceed that made by hybrid corn.

Prof. Hackeman told the agricultural council of the Chicago Association of Commerce, meeting in the LaSalle hotel, Clinton seed is being made available to farmers of 63 Illinois counties. They must plant it for more seed because the supply is small. He predicted supplies would be sufficient for the entire oats acreage of the three states by 1948. The Clinton variety, which grows five feet high, has yielded 102 bushels to the acre.

PLEA TO SETTLE CLAIMS AGAINST INT. PAPER FILED

Boston, Mass., Nov. 23 (AP)—Bartholomew A. Brickley, trustee for International Hydro-Electric system, filed a petition in federal court today asking for approval of an agreement between I. H. E. S. and International Paper company, in a compromise settlement of litigation and claims for 13 million dollars.

Previously Brickley, acting for I. H. E. S. had brought suit against the paper company and International Paper and Power company for 96 million dollars.

The settlement concerns claims and litigations arising from the sale to I. H. E. S. of certain stock of New England Power association, water power sites, and property. The petition asks for authority to carry out the terms of the agreement.

NEEDED, SAYS ATTORNEY

"There is no question but that such legislation is equitable and needed in some cases," Luther M. Walter, Chicago attorney in various railroad reorganizations, said yesterday. A reduction in the interest rate of bonds of railroads undergoing reorganization also should be a matter of consideration, he asserted.

A motion for dismissal of reorganization proceedings of the Missouri Pacific railroad because the road has ample cash on hand for its current debts is in the hands of the court.

Stokely-Van Camp Buys Gibson Canning Company

Gibson City, Ill., Nov. 23—(AP)—Purchase of the Gibson Canning company by Stokely-Van Camp, Inc., Indianapolis, was announced today by Theodore C. McCall and William B. Stokely Jr., presidents of the two companies. McCall will continue to direct Gibson operations, with sweet corn and peas remaining principal products canned. Beans will be a new item.
